We all know that Phillips Academy prides itself on the diversity of its student body. "Youth from every quarter" has come to imply, among other things, "youth from every ethnicity," "youth with varying talents," and "youth with incredibly diverse interests." The Admission Office does a good job in conveying this in a single tri-fold pamphlet. But there are obviously many students' stories omitted. When each of us first stepped foot on this campus, we began to discover things about one another that we never would have guessed from our first impressions, or from the glossy photos in the brochures we received. We would not have guessed that the administration would contemplate renovating the inside of Pearson Hall. Nor would we have guessed that Paz Mendez Hodes '07 would become so passionately opposed to it.

We did not know that Yoni Gruskin '07 would nearly ruin Lynx Mitchell's '10 Andover dream, that Matt Gorski '09 played for the Massachusetts Premier League Soccer team in Italy, or that Daisy Hoffman '08 wears footy pajamas. But these are only a few of the peculiarities of Andover students.

We do not wish to dwell upon Andover's glorified academics, picturesque campus, or friendly environment as so many others do. Instead, we hope to convey this year through your eyes and your stories. Your study spaces, your free time and your sports games are all featured here.

By conveying the thoughts, feelings, whims and eccentricities of individuals in the student body, we hope to personalize this yearbook. In reading the stories of your classmates, teammates, roommates, and friends, always remember that at Andover

"There are Two Sides to Every Story."

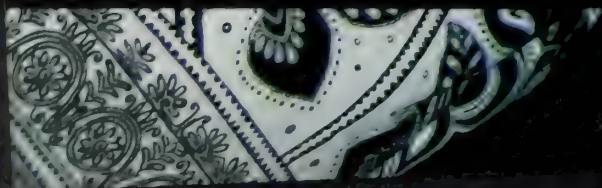

As we sit here, writing this manifesto, we are missing out on the evening's smorgasbord of delectable student activity options – planned by Cindy Efinger and her posse of spirited board members. Instead of lounging here in a desolate room in Paul Revere, eating sour skittles and sipping Snapple Apple, we could be venturing off to what might just be the performance of the year: "Travelin' Max". Taking place within the hub of Andover's social scene, the infamous Ryley Room, this show promises conga lines, free prizes, and a crazy man sporting a sombrero and playing a ukulele. On the other hand, if we hurried, we could rush down to GW circle to hop on the bus to the "first come, first serve" bowling trip.

This is not the first day that Andover kids have waited excitedly for night to fall, and for the activities to begin. The season begins with Cluster Day, on the first Fall weekend back. Though many of us mourned the disappearance of Quad Day, Cluster Day managed to carry on the age old tradition of fun. Taylor's kissing booth was a hit, as usual. No girl in her right mind could resist a peck on the cheek from the flaxen-haired Matt Gorski '09! Next on the docket was a killer Andover/Exeter weekend, complete with fireworks, a football shutout, and plenty of blue sharks to go around. And, of course, the weekend was rounded out by Sadie Hawkins, making girls across campus shake in their boots at the prospect of having to approach that "special someone."

The arrival of a mysteriously warm Winter Term has invited seniors to fantasize about the not-so-distant warm, carefree days of spring. Uppers buckle down to the harsh realities of History 300. Lowerers taking PE curse the drownproofing requirement, while gawking at classmates in bathing suits. And Juniors do... well, whatever it is that Juniors do. Soon, cherry blossoms will announce the arrival of Spring Term. Lazy seniors will taunt underclassman from a safe distance, reclining in their lounge chairs and baby pools on the Great Lawn. As we bid our farewells at graduation, it won't be the late night studying, the brutal Chem 300 tests, or all the times we lost our keys that will stay with us. Rather, we will remember the wonderful times we had at GSA dances, Medieval Festivals, and – how could we forget? – performances of Jason Bishop, the illusionist! Speaking of which, we just realized that we can still catch the tail end of Travelin' Max's "instant party", so we're off to find our IDs and scurry to Ryley!

“He killed my fish!”

I did not kill the fish. It belonged to an incoming freshman girl in Nathan Hale named Lynx.

Yup! That's me!

She had just stepped foot on PA campus and I was helping her move in as one of the PKN blue keys.

I got my fish, Octave (who was in this big glass fishbowl), from the backseat of the car, and walked up to my room with Yoni, making your typical get-to-know-you chitchat. So then I got to my room and I got distracted or something, and I put the fishbowl down in the middle of the floor just inside the door of the room.

I was holding two heavy suitcases in my hands, and when she unlocked and opened the door, I proceeded to move into the room.

And of course, being Yoni, he ran right over the fishbowl in the doorway. I screamed something like "THE FISH!!!!" and ran wildly to the bowl. I was all panicked because most of the water had spilled out and I didn't see Octave anywhere!!!!!!

When she pulled the bag away, there was a fish bowl there, with all of its contents gone (the water and rocks were now soaking her floor). The only thing in the bowl was an exotic looking fish, flopping helplessly, trying to stay alive.

Now, fish die if they are in water with chlorine in it, and town water has chlorine in it, so I couldn't give him water from the sink. So my mom ran down to the car as fast as she could and grabbed a bunch of water bottles and brought them up and we dumped them in the bowl, and . . . amazingly . . . he survived!

I felt awful. Here this girl had traveled all the way from North Carolina with a fish on her lap, and I almost killed it before she could even check out the view from her window. She had been in her dorm room for less than 10 seconds, and her fish was already in critical condition because of me. I felt as if I had already crushed her Andover Dream.

During the Boys' Soccer game at A/E, something tall and yellow and scantily clad came cruising down the hill to the right of the bystanders. Upon closer inspection, it was discovered to be a 6 foot tall banana on a longboard, which went by the name of (to no one's surprise)... Rik Rogers. This banana proved to be an increasingly intriguing spectacle throughout the day and into the night, as a yellow beacon among the sea of blue at the football stadium, an interest-peaking patron at Dylan's (where a man asked permission to take not one, but TWO pictures of him), and a "hitchhiker" along Main Street. First Week

"The first dance of the school year was the night when each day student was paired up with a boarder to sleep over. Although I didn't host a day student, several girls on my hall did. After the dance, we all came back, chilled for a bit, and then went to sleep. Early the next morning (4:30 a.m.), we were all rudely awakened by the obnoxious fire alarms ringing all throughout the dorm. We ran outside, barely acquainted and still asleep. The day students were herded into one group while our prefects took head counts to see if we had lost anyone. Soon, two fire trucks, three police cars, and a few PAPS cars came screaming down Chapel Avenue. I was terrified that everything in my room would burn up, and that I would be forced to live in a tent on the Knoll for the rest of the school year (great!). Luckily, the alarm was only a malfunction with the sensors, and we all went back to sleep. Two hours later, we were awoken AGAIN by the alarms. Seasoned pros by this time, we all filed quickly out of the dorm. This time, only one PAPS car came to 'rescue' us. It turned out to be the sensors again, and we all fell back asleep fairly easily.

They fixed the alarms the next week, and we have not had another 'fire drill' since."

Cluster Kisses

For many years, Taylor has had a kissing booth on Quad Day. It has served them well, raising a large profit and providing a fun product. No one, however, has ever posed any competition, and there have been no services for boys to buy. Day Hall did not have a booth or any ideas for Cluster Day this year, but as many of us were walking to the field, some girls began suggesting a Day Hall kissing booth. We were excited to finally challenge the Taylor kissing regime, and we headed off to offer a similar product for half the price.

Boys were grateful to see that they could finally buy kisses from the hottest girls' dorm on campus. Despite offering a $2 dorm kiss compared to Taylor's $5, we still made around $350, so we clearly offered a popular product. We kept the kissing classy, and we did not offer to lick faces for a few extra dollars. Most people in the school, including many teachers, were glad to finally see competition for Taylor's longstanding dictatorship over kissing booths. Sarah Dewey '07 defended our position by saying, "We may have copied Taylor's idea, but that's the best form of flattery. And it wasn't like we were taking away their customers. We didn't kiss any girls, and I don't know many boys who were excited about being kissed by Taylor." All Day Hall was doing was contributing to the fun of Cluster Day and broadening the list of potential costumers. Taylor should not have seen the Day Hall kissing booth as an encroachment on their territory, and their anger was uncalled for.

The introduction of the new "Cluster Day", in place of the extremely popular "Quad Day" brought some interesting changes to the dynamic of the times, that warm Sunday in September. However, nothing was as shocking as the introduction of the Day Hall girls' not-so-original idea of a Kissing Booth.

Now, the Taylor boys have long been the kiss suppliers of Andover, and we were up to our usual tricks that day, bringing home some cha-ching while pleasing the entire female population of PA. Suddenly, Day Hall marched out with lipstick splattered all over their faces and began recruiting people to buy their kisses. Now, to be fair, Day Hall is one of the only dorms that can compete with Taylor Hall in terms of outright sexiness, but do they really need to do the exact same thing as us? Taylor kissing has been around since the sixties! A case in point: Day ladies racked up around $100, compared to Taylor's $650. Plus, they didn't have Chris Bramwell '07 licking lucky ladies' faces. And they had to ask people to buy kisses.

In the future, we hope that even if "Cluster Day" doesn't relocate to its true home of the Quads, the Day ladies will at least think of something a little more creative.

There are myriad other options for the great bodies and minds of Day Hall, and we hope they make use of them.

Talk Nerdy To Me

By November 3rd, 2006 I had finally found the perfect pair of suspenders. With less than a week to go I found myself completely torn between my bed room slippers and my converse or the plaid skirt verses the striped pants. I was struck with panic when I realized that my signature tee-shirt had been accidentally left at home. Luckily my mother acted quickly and Fed-Exed it to me overnight. Despite my gross dilemma, I knew one thing for sure...it would all be RED!

Thursday morning arrived slowly but surely and I was up at the crack of dawn for intense preparation for the day's event. With my "talk nerdy to me" tee-shirt fitting snugly and my red converse tied tight, I hoisted my pants up high and fastened my suspenders. Glasses, retainer and dictionary in hand, I was dressed and ready for the glorious tradition that is Andover- Exeter Geek Day.

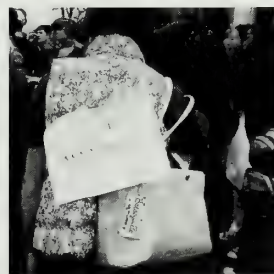

The true magic behind the tradition is the fact that it brings the entire school together to support a common cause. Kids in every social group and clique are found together, walking and talking like geeks, and posing for dorky photos on the steps of Sam Phil. The tradition has grown so far beyond making fun of Exeter students, that today it is an expression of the zealous Andover spirit that makes this school so great.

By the day's end you are exhausted by the awkward smiles and struggling to see through the nerdy glasses, but you have come away from the day with a greater enthusiasm for Phillips Academy. Thursday is over and you are ready to join your peers the following morning decked from head to toe in your best and brightest Andover blue!

Feeling (and that's a good thing) Blue

by Kayla Lawson '07

The sounds of people cheering and horns blowing echoed all around campus during advising period on Andover Blue Day as a pack of AC/DC (Andover Campus Decorating Committee) members, dressed in capes and decked out in blue and white face paint, followed Mrs. Sykes on a tour of campus. Mrs. Sykes, adorned in a stylish Blue Queen costume, handed out blue and white beads to the students around campus. The spirited group started off on the steps of Sam Phil tossing out beads to students walking by. The group was then led to Commons, the Library and GW by Mrs. Sykes where their cheers could be heard all across campus. The group consisted of about ten Seniors, all of whom were dressed in blue from head to toe, and a student (Matt Silva '07) who was dressed in a giant banana suit – Gunga's favorite treat. The recently formed AC/DC club kicked off Andover/Exeter with some flavor by adding some color to campus with blue light bulbs outside of Commons and Day Hall and a giant banner that hung from the pillars of Sam Phil displayed for all to see that said "Go Big Blue". AC/DC also supplied students with colorful signs to hold up at games and sold face paint and blue hair spray.

Girl Ask Boy

He Said

Janet did not seem to understand that I wanted a formal invitation to Sadie even though we were already going out. I hadn't been asked to Sadie since freshmen year and I wanted the satisfaction and ego boost of a formal invitation. I tried dropping some not-so-subtle hints that I was waiting, like, "you know, no one's asked me to Sadie yet. I'm hoping some cute girl asks me soon," but she still refused to ask. I even told her that I'd heard a rumor that another girl was going to ask me, to see if I could coerce an invitation out of her, but she was unfazed. Janet justified her unwillingness to ask with some absurd superstition of hers, which I still don't really understand.

Janet tends to be pretty forward with what she wants, so I knew that buying the right kind of flowers was important. I wanted to get her a beautiful bouquet, but unfortunately, picking out flowers does not come as easily to me as calculus or Shakespeare. Janet succeeded in severely confusing me when she instructed her brother not to buy roses for his date, because just days earlier she mentioned how much she loved roses. Eventually, I asked her to clarify, and she laughed, saying "I wasn't very good at picking up on hints" (which is completely false), and that she would indeed like roses because roses are romantic.

I was so excited for the night that I got ready early, and wound up having to pace around my room for an hour waiting to pick her up. When I eventually walked over to Stimson at 9:15pm, she looked absolutely stunning. Her mom made us pose for a few photos, but not many. Soon we were dancing among hundreds of other teenagers to the smooth sounds of Akon and Snoop Dogg. We danced together the entire night, only pausing occasionally for some fresh air and water, and concluded the night with a slow dance to Snow Patrol's Chasing Cars. We were actually one of the last couples to leave the dance floor, and they even turned the lights on to imply the dance had ended. Afterwards, in the spirit of Sadie Hawkins, Janet walked me back to my dorm and kissed me goodnight.

She Said

It's tradition; I always have the worst luck with Sadie dates. Thus, when asking time came around, I considered myself lucky that I had an automatic date, my boyfriend Matt "Fatty" Harris '07. Although we talked about the dance, I refrained from formally asking Matt, fearing that my brutal cycle of failed Sadie dates would continue. About a week before the dance, my mom invited Matt out to dinner with our family. Just as our entrées were laid before us, my mom asked me if I planned on going to Sadie. "Of course," I responded incredulously. "Matt and I are going." And my Mom, always willing to add a helpful comment, said, "Well, how do you know he doesn't already have a date? Have you asked him yet?" After some pointless stammering defending my reasons for not asking him, my brother changed the subject; I never did end up asking Matt.

Knowing that I am very particular about flowers, I decided it would be wise to give Matt some hints on what type of flowers to buy me. I needed to do it subtly of course. The opportune moment arrived when my brother asked me in Matt's presence what type of flowers to buy for his Sadie date. I made sure to give very clear instructions and said, "Michael, don't buy her roses. Roses are romantic. The only time you buy a girl roses is if you are going out with her." I must have done a good job hinting because Matt bought me a dozen white roses that were absolutely beautiful.

The dance itself was a ton of fun, although there were embarrassing moments. First, I forgot the tickets in my room, which was pitiful because I made a huge deal about Matt picking me up on time. Matt held up his end of the deal, but then we just had to go all the way back to Stimson for me to grab the tickets. Also, at one point, Marlys Edwards tapped Matt on the shoulder and told us to, "Tone it down." Overall though, I had a great time.

It was winter term, and there was about a foot of snow on the ground and bushes and roofs and things. It must have been some weekend morning, because there were a bunch of us, just hanging out outside of Rockwell. All of a sudden we hear this cracking noise, look up, and see that the snow from Rockwell's roof is avalanching down toward us. We were right under the eaves, so we turn and sprint away from the plummeting snow. It did that whole thing that you see in movies - crashing, boiling, with snow dust spraying by us as we ran away from the falling snow. I looked back for a split second as we ran; everything was in slow motion, the snow screaming toward us. We stumbled onto the lawn, past that protective tree, out of the avalanche's reach. And then we laughed. We had survived the Rockwell avalanche.

Thanks to a brilliantly executed prank, our prized tradition of Head of School Day faced a terrifyingly real possibility of its elimination for this academic year. On January 23, 2007, at approximately sixteen and a half minutes after seven o'clock p.m., many students received an e-mail declaring the next day to be Head of School Day. Though many students never received the email, it caused enough commotion to aggravate the librarians, and, apparently, several administrators. The e-mail, as brilliant as it was, had enough flaws for students to figure out that it was a hoax. The body of the email was copied from the previous year's Head of School Day announcement, and none of the standard professional information appeared when one clicked on the alleged sender's name. A good laugh was had by all, and then all of the students returned to work, happily ever after.

Or not. Once Mrs. Chase had heard about the prank e-mail, she sent out an e-mail of her own wherein she admonished the actions of the "hoax". This only prompted another prank e-mail. Mrs. Chase and the administration launched a thorough e-mail and voicemail campaign explaining what was really happening. By the end of the evening, most members of the community had figured out that the real Head of School Day was yet to be announced. The administrators were distraught at the violation of the school's honor code. Students quickly transitioned from hilarious laughter to panic at the thought that Mrs. Chase might retaliate by cancelling Head of School Day altogether for the year.

About twenty two hours after students received the first e-mail, the Philomathean Society organized a forum with Assistant Head of School Mrs. Sykes in Ropes. Never in the history of Commons had Ropes seen so many people; it was too small to fit everyone. Speaking into WPAA's microphones, students offered a number of opinions of various lengths, with an assortment of random comments. Mrs. Sykes occupied the worst seat in the room - especially when the discussion digressed into a fight between disgruntled students and the administration - and she did a hell of a job. Although her opinions may not have been the most popular in the room, her lucid thinking and sincerity helped keep the temperature down.

While some argue that the prank should never have been conceived, it did reveal the school's inaptitude to deal with pranks (and perhaps PANet's weaknesses). For an e-mail that caused twenty minutes of confusion, we, the students and the administration, managed to escalate the situation to the point that we almost collapsed the floor of Ropes. Though the humor of the situation may evade some, it is clear to most. As Robert Frost once said, "In three words I can sum up everything I've learned about life: it goes on." Well, he was right. The school managed to overcome the challenge posed by the prank, and everybody enjoyed Head of School Day one week and two days after the e-mail. -Peter McCarthy '07

Ryley Room

Quiet and peaceful during the week, loud and crazy on the weekends, Ryley Room provides students with a sense of comfort and a place to release some energy. During the week, one is likely to find hungry students down in Ryley, grabbing a slice of pizza and watching TV after class. During the evening, seniors who no longer have much work to do, along with rule-breaking underclassmen who conveniently forget that they're not allowed to be there, can be found in Ryley relaxing with friends and taking a break from their stressful studying.

Things get a little bit louder on Fridays and Saturdays when student activities are held down in Ryley. Apart from dances, these events have included sports games with refreshments and pizza parties. Whatever the event might be, lots of students are guaranteed to be there.

Dances held in Ryley are a whole different story. While some of the bigger dances are held in places such as the Borden Gym or Lower Right, dances in Ryley seem to be more popular. Whether it is a themed dance, a student DJ dance, or a regional, Ryley is usually packed. "Ryley is a big center of interaction. It's where everyone goes to socialize, bond with friends, and meet other people," said Anna Henderson '08.

Division of the Dining Halls

As my Andover experience progresses through time, things that once were have changed.

Our lives are forever shifting, and we are constantly moving from place to place. However, there are two things that have never changed - Lower Left and the delightful Commons cuisine.

Upon asking for a pithy description of Lower Left, a frequent diner said, "it's the opposite of lower right." There is something special about being able to maneuver properly around tables, and receiving an apology when someone bumps into you. Even an occasional admonition from a teacher (usually after people test the aerodynamics of food) is worth appreciating. Not to mention, the line is usually much shorter than in Lower Right.

Why should you eat in Lower Right? Atmosphere. Yes, the lines are a little bit longer than those of Lower Left, and yes, the tables can become a little bit crowded sometimes. But frankly, Lower Right is where all the action takes place simply because more people eat in Lower Right than in Lower Left. Therefore, there is more chatter, more laughter, and more opportunity for bonding. People who eat in Lower Right have more fun! Lower Right is social. You will never have to sit by yourself, because chances are, someone you know is eating there at the same time as you. With tons of people in the dining hall, breakfast, lunch, and dinner are never boring. It's no wonder that all the athletic teams choose to have team meals in Lower Right. The atmosphere is lighter and happier than that of the solemn, boring lower left.

Don't forget, if you are looking at dining from a strictly health related point of view, you are less likely to eat old, stale, or rotten food if you eat in Lower Right. With significantly more people eating in Lower Right, food is consumed at a faster rate. Thus, there are fewer leftovers and rarely any food that is left out for a long period of time.

Basically, everyone should eat in Lower Right. It's more fun, there's always someone you know eating there; and it's healthier!

"The library, on week days, is what Ryley is on weekends."

"Your voice sounds like nails on a chalkboard," Richard, the new librarian proctor, yelled at me. From that moment on, I knew the two of us were destined to be friends. From our first conversation about my Hungarian descent, I was happy to have finally made friends with a member of the OWHL staff – it's always been a dream of mine. Once Richard got my name down he began to convince himself I was somebody else: Maria Shriver, a Kennedy and the wife of Arnold Schwarzenegger. At times, my friends would tell me of his attempts to convince them that I looked like Ms. Shriver. When I wasn't in the library, he would google pictures of Maria to demonstrate the resemblance.

I remember one Thursday very vividly. Working on an English essay, I spent the hours from 5 to 9 in the silent room, what I believed to be the most productive area, with my laptop. Apparently, the silent room wasn't going to be so silent. Walking by periodically and making small talk, Richard proceeded to tell me about his history as an English teacher. Interested in what I was writing about and then moving onto the topic of my favorite book, we began talking about The Great Gatsby and a paper I had written about it. "So where is this amazing paper?" he asked, "I would really love to see it."

Whether it is his continuous attempts to convince me of my "celebrity look alike," his constant remarks about my voice, or his asking me about my Great Gatsby paper, I value the friendship that I have made with the good ol' guy. – Kelsey Thorn '08

down town

Downtown is procrastination. Downtown is a cinnamon spice latte, stocking up on candy, and spontaneously buying picture books at the bookstore. Downtown is far enough for a good puddle fight, but close enough to dry off in Clement House. Downtown is a defense of time-wasting, a justification of spending three dollars on a cup of coffee and two hours talking over it while it gets cold.

Downtown isn't Andover. I understand that Andover is the name of a town, not just a school, one that has its own history, traditions, and people. But to me, downtown is a free-floating, self-sustaining ATM that dispenses drinks, dinners, nights out and orders in. Because I see so little of it, it's Everytown, USA to me, a collection of stores and brand names so familiar they might as well be in the Midwest. Boston is a wonderful city, but it has its own inescapable, recognizable flavor. Downtown, I drink the same coffee as I did in Chicago.

Downtown certainly isn't Andover, the school, either. As much as I see it as an extension of my PA life, it's not PA. It's not famous, it's not awe-inspiring. It has neither worn stone steps nor long lists of names engraved into the walls. It doesn't get me into college or stress me out eleven at night. Downtown is comfortable and casual, like slouching down into a couch. There's nothing to accomplish there, no pressure to be constantly appreciating everything around me.

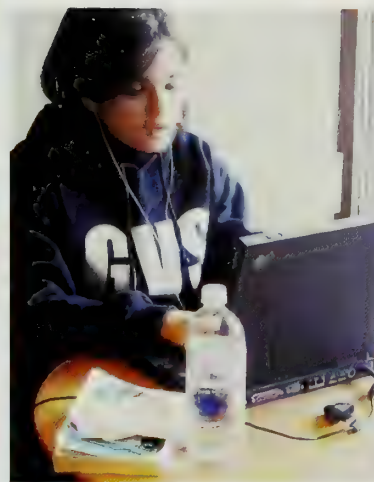

Attending PA certainly isn't the typical high school experience, and living away from home doesn't make it any more typical. When I take a few minutes to walk over to Dunkin' Donuts, it's a breath of fresh air, a shot of anti-homesickness, a chance to have an intensely meaningful conversation or a consciously pointless one. It's a chance to say, "Hey, it's not the end of the world if I don't get a 6." Phillips Academy is not the end and extent of the world. I'm a boarder, and I can't have a car or even leave campus that easily, and even when I'm off campus, I'm still a PA student. Downtown, at least I'm only another teenage customer.

So for all the Wednesday afternoon lunches and Friday night dinners, for when my friends and I bought two bags of dark chocolate at CVS to console ourselves after a chemistry test, for when we went to Bertucci's to celebrate the end of finals and mourn our imminent departure, I am grateful for the unpretentious, un-extraordinary, un-intrusively present downtown.

Lights! Camera! Action!

This year's theater productions dazzled beneath the lights, as performances of Grasshopper Night, The Nerd, and The 24 Hour Plays brought down the house. DramaLab producers Lilli Stein '07, James Flynn '07, and Lucas McMahon '08 headed many of the productions, and contributed new, inventive ideas to spice up the acts.

As usual, the phenomenal production of Grasshopper Night took center stage last fall. One-year senior Barbara Raynal commented, "I hate waking up early because I'm kind of lazy, so when I found out that I had to wake up at 6:30am to buy tickets, I was not happy. In retrospect though, I am so glad I got out of bed." Tessa Pompa '08 astounded audiences with her sultry vocals while Max Meyer '08 engaged us with his jazz melody, in their rendition of Meyer's original composition, Entropy. The Yorkies and Azure channeled 90s pop for their performances of *NSYNC's Bye Bye Bye – complete with choreographed dancing – and Mariah Carey's Always Be My Baby, while dance performances by SLAM, Hypnotiq, and Blue Strut, integrated throughout the show, mesmerized the audience with their energetic music and accurate synchronization. Later in the term, Dave Holliday '08 gave an unforgettable performance as an obsessive compulsive nerd while Blaine Johnson '08 drew laughs as a flustered mother. Between the Fall and Winter Terms, a total of nineteen drama labs were performed in the theater classroom. Veterans to the theater department, Abby Colella '08 and Molly Shoemaker '08 directed Identity Crises and Cannibals respectfully, while novices such as Anna Henderson '08 tried directing for the first time.

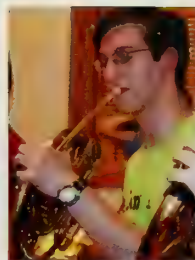

Winter Term, the DramaLab producers premiered a new phenomenon to the Andover community, the 24 Hour Plays. Six playwrights convened at 10pm and worked all through the night until 6am on writing a screenplay. In the morning, six actors and six directors arrived and rehearsed the scripts all day, and then performed them that night. Nat Lavin '07, Jess White '07, Kate Iannarone '08, Sally Poole '08, Thomas Smyth '08, and Laura Mitchell '10 were the guinea-pig playwrights. Iannarone '08 noted, "At around 3:00 am I got my second wind; I was just so emotionally pumped. It was surreal though, seeing the performance of a play I had just written the night before, especially since the director staged it differently than I imagined." The DramaLab producers were extremely impressed by the quality of the plays enacted, as DramaLab producer Lucas McMahon '08 commented, "It was a great way to showcase how much talent there is here at Andover in addition to showcasing Andover students' dedication and intense work ethic to succeed at such a vast undertaking in one day."

McMahon '08 went on to commend the efforts made by his colleagues throughout the year, saying "It has been a very successful year in terms of the quality of shows, attendance to shows, and general interest in the theater department."

The plans for Pearson's renovation say to me that the Administration has forgotten that the institution they run happens to be a school. We don't need a new Ryley Room to keep up with Exeter; as for the "community-building" argument, come to Senior Tea for a great example of community in action - its real name, if you didn't know, is "Senior-Faculty Tea." Students and teachers alike have dismissed the idea that the new Pearson will foster any significant interaction.

I shudder at the thought of my Latin classroom turned into the Dean of Students' office. Andover is a place for learning. Pearson Hall, in its current state, reminds us of our history, part of a tradition of scholarship reaching back not only to the time of Samuel Phillips, but also to the time of Vergil and Homer. As a senior, I'll be gone before the first wall falls, but I refuse to be considered a mere transient. We, the students, are the Academy. Andover exists for us and our faculty. Pearson Hall has been the intellectual heart of campus since it was built in 1817; it has housed a chapel, reading rooms, lecture rooms, and, as it does now, classrooms. To herd the Humanities into a patch behind Commons is an insult to our founders, who believed a classical education was the surest way to encourage goodness along with knowledge.

So they want office space. I recognize that the Administration does indispensable work, but their job is to enhance the work done in classrooms, not offices. By destroying our de facto monument, our physical connection to the students who came before us, they take aim at the soul of our institution.

5 THINGS YOU DIDN'T KNOW HAPPENED IN DORMS

Will Frank '09

"My friends and I have fun with the Fuess boys. We like to scream out the Stimson windows to them, and confiscate their football."

Katharine Matsumoto '07

"There were a couple of times this year when someone in our dorm was down in the dumps after failing a test or paper. In Newman House, to make them feel better, we would hold a dance party, wearing nothing but boxers and neckties, as we flamboyantly danced around to the beat of Britney Spears' Greatest Hits CD. When it was over, all was well in the world of Newman House and we returned to our work."

Tyler Palin '07

"It often seems that the number one rule of Bishop Feng Shui is, 'Your stuff goes on the floor.' Whether this is due to laziness or simple idiocy is unknown. It almost seems that a new species has been spawned in the depths of Bishop's darkest mass of clothes lying on the floor."

Katie Michaelson '08

"Foxcroft Fridays, for me mean hamburgers on the grill and feeling like a senior. Ten people all gather around on Friday evenings for some 'manly grilling.' What's better than three manly Foxcroft seniors cooking you burgers on the grill?"

J.J. McGregor '08

"There's a hole in my door that people put things through. One day I was looking through it and this random pencil came flying at me and poked me in the eye. I couldn't see for days."

Coming into the season as a postgraduate, I was unsure what to expect. I didn't know how a group of guys that had been together for four years would react to a postgraduate showing up for a single season. Junction football camp during the summer erased all doubt. From the minute I introduced myself to everyone on the team; I was welcomed with open arms and felt as much of a part of the team as a four-year senior.

Our team meshed well during the preseason and we had athletes at every position. I knew that we would be a contender in the league. The first game against Loomis was nerve wracking; we were losing 12-9 at the half. I was confused as to what could have possibly gone wrong, but, as we should have, we pulled away big time in the second half scoring 28 unanswered points. Our combination of an explosive rushing attack, deadly passes and a tenacious and swarming defense made us a triple threat, something no other team in the league could boast. We cruised through the regular season, destroying whoever crossed our path. Going undefeated in the regular season was great, and I believe that we deserved it due to the hard work everyone put into each practice.

"Andover drops Exeter," was the headline in the Boston Globe the morning after the A/E games. I couldn't help but crack a smile as I was reading it. The Andover/Exeter rivalry was unlike anything I had ever been a part of. The school spirit was unprecedented all week and the crowd was incredible for four long quarters - even though the 43-14 score didn't make for much of a game. Beating Exeter was the highlight of our season for two reasons: we beat our arch nemesis, and we proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that we were the best team in the NEPSAC freelance. Our trip to the New England Championship game was well deserved and a priceless experience. Although we didn't get the break we needed, we fought tooth and nail to the very finish, falling by only 5 points to the "untouchable" Salisbury squad. We had never truly been tested like we were in the championship. My old football coach always used to say, "Football doesn't build character, it reveals it." I couldn't agree more. Frankly, I didn't know too much about our team's character because everything had been so easy for us. After playing that Salisbury game, I knew what we were all about. Battling back from 13-0 in the first quarter, and holding a 14-13 lead until late in the fourth demonstrated what we were made of. Under pressure for the first time, we remained tough and resilient with a never say die attitude. That was what the Phillips Andover football team was all about! Throughout the season, Coach Mo kept reminding us that we were family. From the sweltering August heat, to the muddy, rainy, and cold November nights, I could not have asked for a better group of guys to go to war with week in and week out. This was truly a year I will never forget, and a year I'm glad I got the chance to be a part of...PA football 2006, BAAAAALLLIINNNNN!!!!!!

The team was nervous before the meet with Exeter. On paper, it looked like it was going to be very close, and to win it a fair number of us knew we had to run exceptional races. Ken Watari '07 and Mike Discenza '09 were injured, so while they could encourage and support us mentally, they were not among our ranks when the gun went off. Exeter's Graham Keggi took the lead immediately and Dave stayed on his heels for most of the race, while the rest of us vied for position amongst our red-clad opponents. There was a moment toward the end where Ben and I passed an Exeter runner and knew that if we could stay ahead of him, we would win. We did, and we won. Andover's top five finishers all ran personal bests by at least ten seconds, and the prospect of winning interschols the following Saturday seemed suddenly possible. In short, we'd pulled it off—we'd done something that earlier in the season had seemed downright unlikely. We were very proud.

Stickball

Avery Stone '10 battles for possession

As the minutes of double overtime wound down, the ball came up to the stroke mark and with my reverse stick I got a piece of the ball. The shot was just hard enough to slide past the goalie. At the same time, a Nobles defender ran into my follow through and broke her nose. No one realized this until later, and before I knew it, our entire team was in a huge pile jumping and laughing and screaming with joy. At the time, I remember thinking that this was the moment from the game that I would remember forever. We had worked so hard throughout the entire season to make it to the New England Tournament, and now we were advancing on to the finals. We truly lived up to our team motto of "Nothing is over until we decide it is." Time and again we proved ourselves to be the come-back team, never giving up until we heard that final whistle. We had the most heart and determination and never once did we allow our opponent or the score to affect our play. Instead, we simply enjoyed being out on the field with one another, and because of this we had a great deal of faith and were able to play our best when it mattered the most.

'Twas the cold Saturday morning of the New England Field Hockey semi-finals. We were playing our arch-nemesis, Nobles, a team that had taken us into overtime for the past two years, including a painful tie after an intense regular season game this fall. All our heart, hard work, and determination went into this game. If we won, we would continue on to Andover's first field hockey championship in thirteen years. It was all we wanted. After Nobles tied it up in the last few minutes of regular play we knew it was time for business. We went into first period overtime, beads of sweat on our foreheads and steam coming off our jerseys. Alas, after the first 10 minutes passed, complete with pushing, yelling, groaning, and a dramatic asthma attack suffered by one of Nobles very own, we soldiered on into double overtime. The officials decided to increase the intensity by declaring that they would only stop play if "someone's arm got cut off" on the field. From the sidelines I clenched my teammates hands and jumped up and down as we seesawed between finishing Nobles and never getting to play another game as PAFH06, a heart wrenching possibility. Suddenly we had a fast break. Ali Zindman '07 pounded towards the goal with two grunting Nobles girls on her tail. In one swift motion she swung her stick back and slammed it into the ball. I heard the wonderful sound of a goal. Ali threw her stick into the sky as I stormed the field, interlocked with my teammates. We met in the middle, hugging in a circle, the taste of salty sweat and tears mixing in our mouths. As we rejoiced together, our cheers were met by opposing screams from a pile of Nobles girls. "WE NEED A TRAINER OVER HERE!" we heard, as we quieted down and looked over. A Nobles player was lying on the turf, shaking, with her face covered in blood.

Not much was expected of this team, as there were many young players in Coach Carr's first year as head coach. However, with the help of seniors Alex Clifford '07, AJ Charles '07, Sam Gould '07, James Freeman '07, Jason Zhu '07, and Morgan Griff '07, the squad really came together as a very close team which led to the successful season. Head coach Stephen Carr along side assistant Matt Langione, led the team with their non-stop enthusiasm, determination, and love for the game. Not only did they balance the variety of ages on the team, they made this group one of the tightest teams I have ever played for. Whether it was the fun stuff, such as world cup soccer at team prep camp, or the brutal, continuous sprints and three mile runs, everything was for a reason. Unfortunately, the team did not get what they deserved. When rival Exeter scored with less than ten minutes left in the team's final game - which ended in a tie - the boys knew that this would cost them a playoff spot. Although the team was just ten minutes away from a playoff seed, this was truly a great season thanks to the great coaches, inspiring seniors, and a great group of underclassmen who show signs of a promising future for the Big Blue.

I broke my arm early in on the soccer season battling a Loomis opponent. Shortly after my cast was removed, our team scrimmaged in the cage because it was test of Q outside. It was just supposed to be a laid back scrimmage. The ball rolled into a corner right near one of the big staircases and I sprinted after the ball with Emily Weedon '07 on my tail. I suddenly lost my balance and stumbled. For some inexplicable reason I could not stop running. I didn't want to fall on my weak arm, still wrapped up to protect it, and so, I smashed face first into the staircase. Blood immediately gushed out from my nose. I had managed to break two bones all in one soccer season. My teammates ran off in different directions grabbing ice and calling for the trainers. I was embarrassed to say the least, but my teammates supported me, while, of course, still picking on me at the same time, reenacting my clumsy stunt. I had to wear a facemask to match my embarrassing huge wrapped arm. There I was, a complete freak of nature, a spitting image of Freddy Cougar, on the soccer field, and still, my teammates stood by me. I scared the heck out of our opponents running around with a caged face and a clubbed arm. It was obviously a challenging season for me, but, still, one with victories, laughs, and friendships I will never forget.

—Katy Holihan '07

The most anticipated practice of the year, World Cup day was encroaching upon us. My teammates and I divided up into small groups of three each team taking on a countries name. My group was now fifteen minutes late for practice as we scampered out onto the field with an authentic English flag we borrowed from a girl in my dorm. Lisa and the girls were in hysterics as we approached the huddle dressed in identical blue shorts, white socks with red stripes and t-shirts with the word England unmistakably fashioned across the front. To top it all off our faces were caked with paint forming the union jack symbol. Although the paint and English apparel did not perpetuate us to World Cup victory that day, the memories we made that afternoon on the soccer field will continue on with me after my time here at Andover has passed. —Meagan Hartnett '07 hen you begin playing water polo, you quickly learn where main arteries and nerves are located. A thumb skillfully pressed deep into an armpit can make the arm go limp for several seconds. Skills such as these were utilized in our bloody death match against Exeter. For four whole periods we thrashed about; even when the surface of the water lay placid, the fighting continued underwater. After the four periods of brutal play, we were tied with Exeter, a team that had not lost in fifteen years.

We began our cheer on the deck just before over time started. I looked around at my teammates. Our goalie's nose was still bleeding from a shot he had taken to the face. Bruises covered several faces, and everyone had claw marks on their torsos and limbs; some even bleeding. The entire team was worn and exhausted, but still we had the burning desire to continue.

In a close overtime period, we ended up losing by two points. This was one of the most devastating losses of my life, yet it was one of the most rewarding. I will never forget how far this team went, nearly overcoming a water polo powerhouse in New England. Many of us had just started playing in our few years here at Andover; yet together we had taken each other to a new level.

our days a week after school, swarms of athletes descended upon Rafferty Field. Wearing uniforms ranging in color from orange, to bright green, to yellow, these athletes headed to one of the academy's most popular sports, Cluster Soccer. While the lack of parity between all eight teams was evident from the beginning, the spirit never wavered for each of the squads.

The games were played with an often fierce level of competition, but at the end of the day, everyone walked off the field intact (with a few unlucky exceptions) and smiling. Playing on the West Quad South team, I was able to witness the fun atmosphere for everyone despite a mediocre record, as well as a firsthand view of the FLU (Flagstaff second team) dynasty's lone win of the season. Everyone wound up making the playoffs, and there were upsets throughout, as neither of the two top seeds made it through to the finals. When all was said and done, Abbot won out over a TNT (mixed) squad in a rain-soaked final. Between strange player nicknames, team or cluster pride and the generally crazy atmosphere, everyone involved can retain at least a few memorable moments from the season and can agree, if nothing else, that Cluster was a fun respite from a day of work in the afternoon.

he boys basketball team's recipe for success this year included one part hard work, two parts dedication, and a whole lot of tender loving care. After two tough losses to begin the season, the team eventually posted one of the best records in team history, but more importantly, logged a season chock full of memories and experiences. Post-grad's Jelani Floyd and Morgan Griff dominated the post with the help of Will Sherrill, reeling from an injury in the football season, to help buoy a strong core of slashers and shooters including Matt Silva, Chris Bramwell, Ekow Essel and Mike Palermo. However, the team's success can be attributed to the hard work ubiquitous in every practice, and the less-heralded players' ability to prepare the stars. Despite the injury of scout team warrior Mike Tully, ballers by the name of Draper, Loeffler, Louie, Watson, Perez, and Holden provided energy of the bench to achieve a 13-7 record. Although just missing out on the playoffs, the boys basketball team had a season to remember.

This year everyone had the same overall goals: playing as a team and playing to win. Our two captains, Kristen MacDonald '07 and Stuart Anderson '07, as well as the other three seniors, really stepped up and assumed leadership roles. They were motivators for each other and for all the younger players on the team, myself included. With this motivation and the desire to be successful, we got the season off on the right foot with a big win over Brewster. The three uppers, Kelly Fox '08, Becca Zinsmeister '08, and Hailee Minor '08, also helped in terms of contributing to the team morale and ability. We had four newcomers, Jane Peters '07, Becca Bendetson '09, Missy Wingard '08, and Catherine Coppinger '09, who instantly benefited the team with their skills. Last year we had a hard time adjusting to each other and playing as a unit, which led to a less victorious season than everyone had hoped. However, since most of the team now had the experience of playing together last year, we had a better understanding of each other's styles, strengths, and weaknesses. I believe that we will continue to improve, and I look forward to the seasons to come.

— Emily Zinsmeister '09

Coach Boardman always says, "Play for the seniors." Every game, the team knows it is '07's last chance to play Tabor, last chance to play Worcester, Nobles, etc. As a senior, the support of the girls around me has been unfaltering. The team this year is more cohesive than it has been since I have been a part of it. We've had set backs, but nothing that this resilient group of girls can't handle. We may not have the most naturally talented group, but we have fighters, hard workers and girls who play for each other. To Kristin, Kara, Stuart and Jane, thank you for leading the team, and to the rest of you, Kelly, Hailee, Becca Zin, Emily Zin, Copp, Becca B, Missy, keep working as hard as you have this season for the remainder of your time here, get the best out of it and appreciate it for what it is. Be proud to be a part of PABallers. Thank you to all our families and the faculty members we always saw in the stands. We loved having you cheer us on. And finally, to Coach Boardman and Kate, thank you from all of us. You've taught us so much more than you know.

Every time the boys' hockey team skates onto the ice, I am filled with pride knowing that I, as one of the managers, can be associated with this group of hard-working individuals. I have different responsibilities than do the players, but when we win, I still feel like a part of the team. Although many find it hard to believe, the work is harder than it seems - filling water bottles, taking stats, running the clock, filming games. For the managers, the amount of effort we put in never equates to a win or a loss. During tough games, it gets pretty frustrating knowing that nothing we do will affect the day's outcome. Before managing the team I had always loved watching hockey but I never fully understood all of the rules or its complexity. Managing has given me the opportunity to better understand the sport, and I now appreciate how much training and dedication goes into creating a solid hockey team. The players' abilities to communicate verbally and, more impressively, nonverbally on the ice are extremely admirable. Yet perhaps even more remarkable is the team's unconditional sportsmanship towards its opponents, the officials, and one another. I am so glad that I decided to manage this season because I have gained so much knowledge about the sport of hockey and met a bunch of great guys. Plus, there's the prestige. I mean, come on, it's boys varsity hockey. It doesn't get much cooler than that.

Hockey is a relatively new phenomenon in my life. I have watched it on and off for about eight years now, although the year that the NHL closed down was a sad day for me. It's not something I grew up watching, but rather something I picked up when I started playing hockey in grade school. I started watching the game because my coach said it would help me on the ice. I don't think my perspective of hockey is any different than someone who has never played it before, but I can appreciate a good play when I see one.

My favorite part of hockey is the combination of finesse and brute strength. It's amazing to watch a 220 pound man glide gracefully down the ice while dodging very large opponents. This being said, I do enjoy watching a player get completely destroyed from a good check.

I am probably one of the most vocal and loudest fans cheering during a game. Whether it is at Andover, a college game, or on my couch screaming at the TV, I have no inhibitions when it comes to watching hockey. I cheer because even if I am not playing, I am still a part of the game. Sometimes, fans are too timid. If someone gets flattened, people either wince or get excited. I'm the latter: I go for the adrenaline rush. The best part of being a fan, however, is that if you lose, it's not your fault. But, whether or not you contribute to a win, you end up celebrating it with everyone else.

Interschols this year was a very close race, we were a close match with Holderness, and with some luck we thought we might be able to beat St. Paul's. The morning of the race we were up before sunrise to get to the race on time, and everyone was very quiet in the rally wagon. The girls team this year was mostly seniors so we all really wanted to do well. The classic race was first and even though the waxing conditions were terrible we did well enough to put us into second place, only three points off of first! We were pumped for the team relay later that day but when the time came everyone was tired and Holderness ended up making up the points and coming in second. Third place for the third year was disappointing but I wouldn't trade the last three years with four amazing girls for anything.

We had a rough season with the lack of snow through most of January and really until the storm on Valentine's day. The highlight of the season had to be the Saturday morning in January where we cancelled a trip to Waterville Valley for training because it rained and then was 70 degrees. So, instead of heading north and skiing on snow we made pancakes at my apartment, changed into shorts and T-shirts and went roller-skiing on the roads of Andover instead.

SLAM it

It started off as a normal varsity girls' basketball game for SLAM. We were doing sidelines, timeouts and cheering on the team. One of the basketball team players had just finished shooting her foul shots when someone runs into the gym yelling "It's Head of School Day!" Without any hesitation, the whole team started jumping up and down and yelling out of joy. Akosua Oforiwa-Ayim '07 and I stood around deciding whether or not we would let people on the team run to Commons to catch a glimpse of Mrs. Chase walking around with the hockey stick. We didn't really have much time to think about it because the whole team had already sprinted out of the gym to Commons. Akosua decided to sprint to Commons as well because it was her senior year - but we all returned to the gym before the game was over. For the rest of the game, we all acted as if nothing had happened and kept cheering on the team.

Who can be disappointed in a season when every player never stops fighting? Our effort didn't always translate into wins, but it was always there. Though not often accepted as one, squash is a team sport and every guy on this team understood that. When you stepped on the court you weren't just playing for yourself, but for your entire team. There may not have been many wins, but we earned every one of them as a team. I'm writing this before Interschols, but if I know my boys we're going to surprise everyone, but ourselves with the way we perform. No one wanted it more than us.

I love the size of the squash team. For those who don't know, a squash team consists of only 9 people. Thus, the opportunity to know your teammates is greatly improved. This year, we all became really close. Often, the entire team would eat dinner together in Commons, and because there are so few of us - unlike other sports teams - we could all fit around one table. I love that, whether it is cheering during each other's matches, or sharing stupid pick-up lines and jokes on the bus, we are always supportive of one another. I believe that because we work so well together, we function as a positive unit for each other during squash matches, and even during the school day. It makes squash season a lot more fun!

As I watch Coach Murphy write the sprint set for the day on our white board - 20x100 yards on 1:40, odds free, evens stroke - I think, "At least I'll get a good night's sleep tonight." During a long set like that, the trick to surviving is getting an upbeat song stuck in your head so that you have a solid rhythm going. We make special "Swim Mixes" that we blast in the pool area for exactly that purpose. The song "Every Time We Touch!" is a team favorite. I did not start sprinting exclusively until I came to Andover in 2005. On my team back home, sprinters and distance swimmers train the same sets, but at Andover, people always train in their specialty. Now, my event is the 100-yard backstroke. In sprinting, everything happens so fast. One minute your fingertips are clasped around the edge of the block as the official says, "Take your mark," and the next minute, you are at the wall checking your time on the scoreboard. Consequently, the swimmer who wins is the one with the more cleanly executed race. In this way, sprinting differs from distance swimming. In distance events, a swimmer has time to redeem themselves from mistakes they may have made earlier in the race - for example, a slow start off the block. Sprinters do not have that opportunity: an entire race can happen in as little as twenty four seconds, and everything matters: your speed off the block, your tight streamline, the power in your pull, and your exploding push from your flipturn. You never stop kicking, or steal a glance at the swimmer in the lane next to you, and you barely ever breathe, for seemingly insignificant actions like this could cause you to lose the race. There is no other way to put it - sprinting is exhilarating.

—Veronica Faller '09

A distance swimmer knows that at the end of her race, she'll be exhausted, but that she will not care. That feeling, for me, is racing at Andover. Swimming distance and swimming sprints require two different mentalities. Unlike those that swim in shorter events, a distance swimmer has time during a race to think about the pain - the burn in the shoulders and arms and the pressure in the lungs. And, despite the pain, there are still thirteen laps to go. I am often asked if training distance ever gets boring. Yes, it does. Inevitably, though, I find some way to entertain myself. I end up making a lot of pie charts in my head - every time I hit a wall, a fraction of the pie disappears. Sometimes I sing to myself. Usually, halfway through the set, I forget about the pies and the singing, because at a certain point it takes everything I have to simply keep moving. This is when the team bond becomes essential. I owe every second that I have ever dropped to the distance swimmers I train with every day. We swim longer, and (debatably) harder than anyone else. But, being who we are, we love it. Swimming distance and swimming at Andover are permanently linked in my mind because I never swam distance before I came here. At this point, it has become a team joke if I compete in anything else. Being a distance swimmer is always unique because there are so few of us. We are sent to Lane 1 and teased about being separated from the rest of the team. Nevertheless, living in Lane 1 gives a distance swimmer at Andover a unique quality, and I would not have it any other way. —Carly Villareal '07

The Boy's Indoor Track Team may have been in the midst of a rebuilding year (translation – we didn't win as many meets as last year and we lost to Exeter). However, it was still a winning year in terms of the motivation, enthusiasm, personal improvement, and sportsmanship displayed by all competitors. In the words of a famous coach, "sportsmanship isn't everything, it is the only thing!"

–Coach

"One of the best races of the season was the mile versus Exeter. Eli Howe '09, Dave Wilson '09, and Eliot Shimer '07 went out and ran a smart, hard race. Even though they failed to capture 1st place, Eli and Dave's strong finishes in 2nd and 3rd showed a dogged determination which truly represented the spirit and dedication of the 2006-2007 boys indoor track team."

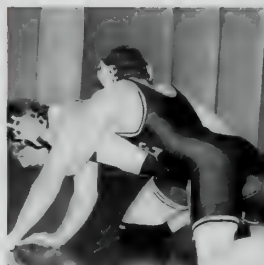

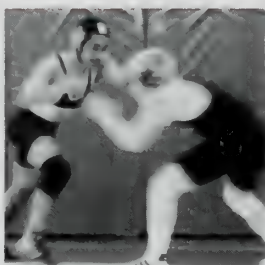

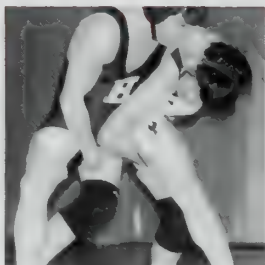

–Hanson Causbie '08

"Lots of people like indoor track because it's a very individual sport. There are no team championships, and it is a great way to keep in shape during the winter season. I love indoor track because amidst all the personal development, there's always a feeling of family. Whether we're singing, shouting out random numbers, dodging traffic, or shattering personal records, it's always for the team."

I think Colin Dunn '07 has to be one of the hardest wrestlers I've ever seen. In many matches over the course of his three seasons on the team, he was down in the third period and never gave up. He fought and fought and refused to lose and most often he won. Shay has come a long way since his freshman year. When he started his weight was hovering in the double digits. Through hard work and determination he worked his way up in both weight and status on the team. Last year he was an All-American wrestler and the whole team respects him for his dedication and intensity. He has worked hard and in four years has become one of the best prep wrestlers in new england. -Amy Fenstermacher '07 imagine that coming to Andover feels something like selling your soul. Andover becomes your everything. You surrender four years to Andover with a white receipt of matriculation, and you leave with a diploma and a set of memories that you will soon stow in the 'Andover' portion of your past. It's scary to think that all that is Andover can be contained in the space of four years. It seems like there are too many experiences to cram under the heading of my high school years. But as daily life at Andover is hardly serious, the past four years hardly deserve a serious reflection.

Much of my Andover experience revolves around food. We wait so long for bagels during conference period that many of our political platforms address our right to toast. We go to obscure clubs because the advertisements mention pizza. We hate weathering trips downtown in the snow, but we deem it necessary when commons just isn't cutting it anymore. And when downtown looks too far away, we get creative. Especially by senior year, we are expert innovators of new common's ideas. I've seen some borderline inappropriate combinations, most of which involved salad bar cheese. That's legit what I think of when I reflect on my eating experience at Andover. We overdo it on the cheese.

Closely related to the food issue on campus is the exercising issue. The work out room is truly reflective of the salad pot that is diverse Andover. We have our natural born athletes, those who resort to cheering for natural born athletes, and those who dance. We all come together to sweat and wait for elliptical machines. We all occasionally squirt each other by accident with the unlabeled yellow disinfectant spray. I trust my school mates enough to look really disgusting in front of them. It's a bonding thing.

When we're neither eating food nor burning it off, we're mostly tired and worried. Andover students match rigorous academics with relentless complaining. In an environment where all of my peers suffer with the same assignments and agonize over the same grading system, our commiseration at least makes it more fun. We work hard almost as often as we talk about working hard, and we know, due to all the talking, that everyone else works hard. We know that every other senior has taken finals and weathered assessments for the past four years to reach June.

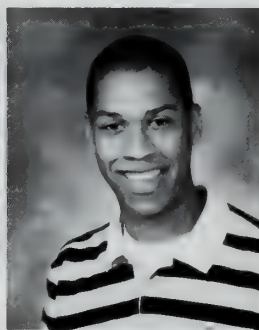

I've spent so much time here, learning Andover talk and wearing Andover garb, that the rest of the world has become an irrelevance made blurry by the lens of the Andover bubble. Emerging into the real world with titles of alumni is a daunting idea. Of course, I'll miss the quintessential Andover landmarks, the bell tower, the columns of Sam Phil, that tree near Morse that we celebrate on Arbor day. Mostly though I'll miss the comfortable details of the life I've settled into here, and the hilarious idiosyncrasies of the goofballs I call my classmates. By Steph Marton '07

Ever Wonder it Feels Like?

...to spend 80 hours a week in the basement of Morse? To cycle through Belgium? To win America's Most Talented Kid? To have a sibling at Andover? To live with the boys in Stowe House? To want to become a degenerate junkie? To be called a "meatball"? To become Andover's most active conservationist? To be fluent in four different languages? To go to worlds for Irish Step Dancing? Meet the students of Andover who do...

Give us the basics: who is in your dorm?

There are 8 people in our dorm: Jonathan and Brian Louie '07, Ikechi Ngwangwa '07, Ekow Essel '07, Patrick Curtin '07, Curtis Holden '07, Edwin Diaz '07, and Travis Wright '08

How long have you been stacking the dorm and why did you decide to stack?

Except for Ekow and Travis, we have been in the dorm for 3 years. At the end of freshman year, there were like 12 people trying to get into this 8 person dorm. We thought about stacking a hall in another dorm but we wanted to stack and the rooms here are sick - just ask most females on campus

For those of us that haven't seen it, please describe Stowe House

3 doubles...2 singles...1 shower...2 shower heads...1 curtain (not the guy who lives here)...1 hallway. 1 Underground Railroad...2 irons...4 ligers... Mad plants... And 1 goblin.

What does Stowe House bring to the PA campus?

Everything. Not to toot our own horns but we're an integral part of PA culture. And if you think about it, what would a Ryley Room dance be without us? Individually we are bosses, as a unit we are unstoppable. We brought sexy back

What characterizes your dorm?

Swagger, backivity.

If you were all celebrities/cartoon characters/rappers/animals what would you be?

Ikechi would be the late great Tupac Shakur or a chihuahua. The Louies would be the Olsen twins: Brian would be Mary Kate and Jon would be Ashley. As cartoon characters they would be the Double Dragons. Eddie would be Prince or Enrique Iglesias. Ekow would be a polar bear. Pat would be that girl in the story about those 3 bears. Curtis would be Gary Coleman. Travis would be Alfonso Ribiero

If each of you were to be awarded a superlative, what would it be?

Most Back: All of Us

Most Likely to Graduate Cum Laude from Boss University: All of Us

Most Likely to Get Assassinated: Travis Wright.

Most Likely to Assassinate Travis: Ekow Essel.....and probably the rest of the school

Most Likely to Turn Chess into a Contact Sport: Curtis Holden

Most Likely to Practice Polygamy: Eddie Diaz

Most Likely to Host the Soul Train/BET Awards: Patrick Curtin

Most Likely to Beat Prince and the Revolution in a Pick Up Game: Ikechi Ngwangwa

Most Likely to Steal Jon's Identity: Brian Louie

Most Likely to Let a Kid Drown Because Mr. Modeste Lowered His Confidence by Failing Him at the Travel Stroke and Giving Him an Incomplete for Physical Education Lower Year: Jonathan Louie

What are the benefits of living in a stack?

We are trained in the Art of War by a former mercenary. Harriet Beecher Stowe is our homegirl. Edwin Muniz - let's not forget, he lived here for a year. The sick dorm gear that we just haven't got around to making yet. Friday Night Sissy fights. Freestyle sessions that gave birth to the infamous Jah Rastafari. Bathroom sleepovers. 12:00 am Golden Chopsticks deliveries.

Tell us something about each of you that nobody else knows.

Max Ernst and Billy Spang still live in Ikechi's room

Ekow's real name is Jack.

Curtis had ab implants

Jon is really Brian.

Brian is really Jon....Sorry Annie

Deep down inside Travis is the nicest person you will ever meet.

Most successful form of procrastination?

Philosophical debates. Dance rehearsals. Figuring out who's going to call and who's going to pick up the Golden Chopsticks. Creating ebonics. Madden '07. Making home videos. 80's dance parties. Going to the Stowe House Barber Shop. Watching Newsies. Trying to think of clever things to write for Pot Pourri. Stick Time at the Hockey Rink Favorite bonding activity?

Group crying while listening to Emo Music.

Most irritating aspect of living in a small dorm?

Travis Wright, and the ghost of Harriet Beecher Stowe. Shawty be wylin' out.

What music is most likely to be heard in Stowe House?

Snow Patrol, Newsies Soundtrack, Cynthia and Johnny O, the latest JRF track, that new Dreezy, DJ Webstar, As Tall As Lions, Prince and the Revolution, Twan Mac (look him up on iTunes, the dude is serious), Jim Jones, Sublime, Pink Floyd.

Where does the magic happen?

In the Common Room on the "Grace" pillow

Is there anything else that you would like to add about your dorm?

Honestly, we've had a good run these past few years, and we've really gotten to know each other pretty well. We have built life long friendships and we are really going to miss each other. Oh yeah, and Jack is dating Karamo.

Dorm Quote: "They say you can't have your cake and eat it too tell me what's the reason/ what's the point in me having cake if I can't eat it."

Janet Scognamiglio

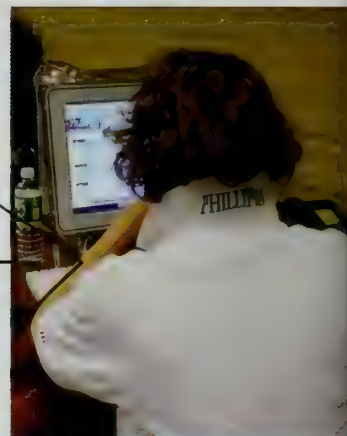

Talks to Steve Blackman

he might end up living in your basement

I'm a four-year senior from Pleasantville, NY. Before coming to Andover, I was a regular kid. I played soccer – poorly – and read a lot. I started EMARC as a freshman, and have done it all four years. I'm the managing editor of Frontline; we're working on reviving it. I'm on the board of Democrats Club. I helped organize a drive to put up flyers to remind people in Lawrence to vote. I participate in JSU. The hardest part of PA is just surviving and keeping all the balls in the air when you're trying to juggle extracurriculars, sports, and academics.

My greatest accomplishment was getting the commencement issue out for The Phillipian. The Phillipian is due at 3 on Thursday afternoon, so everything must be done by 1 am on Wednesday. It's very hectic, scrambling for articles - or if someone doesn't take pictures for an event. I don't know how we get it done every week, but somehow we do. I think it's just sheer will-power. But there are also times in the Phillipian office where we just talk about Andover and its issues, and that's just as rewarding. It's tough because we're students but we are expected to make judgment calls that professionals make... Whether or not something is biased, for example. In one word? Hectic. When I took the Phillipian over last winter people told me "You have no idea what this is going to mean, editors never sleep." I had no sense of what Phillipian entailed even though I'd been writing for it for over a year, and it has defined my Andover experience.

My favorite aspect of Andover is the feeling of tradition, and the feeling that you're part of a long line of students who have experienced the same thing and grown on the same values. At the same time though, I feel that the ethos of Andover is changing. The competition with college is chipping away at Andover's unique sense of place and history. People are more concerned with liabilities (Burning the A, for example), and kids are more afraid of not getting into college. It takes away the uniqueness of Andover as an institution.

PA helps kids develop from scared middle school students into conscientious and adult global citizens. You come to campus as a freshman, and a lot of people are leaving their parents for the first time. You have to live with your peers and do your own laundry, and that's difficult with the rigorous responsibilities of Andover. But you find your passions. What stays with you from Andover is not what grade you got on a test but the more amorphous.. human aspects. that make PA what it is.

abhishek.sripad

Q & A Where did you attend school previously?

Doherty Middle School, baby, right down the street

What have you achieved at Andover?

Gained a lot of confidence

What is your favorite aspect of Andover?

Just talking to people, you learn so much from just talking to students, teachers, staff members. Clubs like Cafe are great, you can talk about community issues. I also like just talking with my friends in the library when I'm procrastinating work. I enjoy having those conversations where there isn't one answer

What interested you at Andover, community service, clubs, etc.?

I started Cricket Club with my friend Hassan Siddiqi, we started it freshman year and it's been our baby, it's the club you look most forward to, Head of Indopak, Head of Hindu Student Union Favorite ice cream?

Cake batter, close tie b/c Richardson's and Cold Stone Creamery. As for toppings I love rainbow jimmies, cherries, a HUGE fan of Reese's pieces, I could put that on anything, I just love peanut butter, maybe some whip cream to top that off Favorite pizza topping?

Combo: Let me spin it for you, broccoli, mushrooms, and yellow pepper

Is it hard to practice your religion on campus?

My religion and my culture define a large part of me. It gives me a solid foundation, especially at Andover, you need to know who you are if you want to be successful, be secure of yourself, and I feel they give my identity a lot of security. In reference to Indopak, the unite thing will stay with me forever, in the sense that it's always reassuring when you see people with the same background as you. Last year's board showed me that it's ok to embrace my Indian culture while being an American Memories?

Beginning of senior fall we were having an interfaith service and after the service I was talking to this lady and she said, "I'm Michael's mom" and I said, "Michael who?" and she said Michael Ebner-the reverend at PA. It put things in perspective for me because I think of him as a faculty member and I was like, "Wow, he does have a mom."

Giacomo Chiaro

>> PP: So you're a 19-year old PG from Bologna, Italy. Were you scared about coming to the United States?

GC: I was pretty scared about coming here because I didn't know anything. I didn't know anybody here. But I've always wanted to come to the U.S. and I guess I just got over my fear because I haven't had any concern at all - there hasn't been a single bad day.

PP: And everyone seems to be calling you 'Pasta'...

GC: Everyone calls me Pasta! And there's a video of me on Myspace.com where this guy was recording me saying "Gucci" because he thought it was funny! People are always saying things like "Gucci", "Ferrari", "Lamborghini", "Pasta", "Spaghetti" and "mafia."

“Once there was this clever guy who said “meatballs” which makes no sense because it’s English!”

PP: What do you miss most about Italy?

GC: I don't really miss Italian social life, because it's pretty stressful. You're always clubbing and partying, and after a time you get tired! But we only play hip-hop music in the Ryley Room, and we should have some house music. Other things that I miss are food because Common's food isn't real food, and not even Bertucci's is real Italian food. There's no Italian food here.

>> PP: Where are you from?

HW: I am from Lincoln, Massachusetts, but my family just moved to Switzerland, Geneva, this summer.

PP: How long have you been at Andover?

HW: I have been at Andover for three years. I have been here since I was a freshman, but I took a year off to go on School Year Abroad.

PP: Why did you decide to go to France?

HW: It was something that I always wanted to do. I applied when the time came and got into the France program.

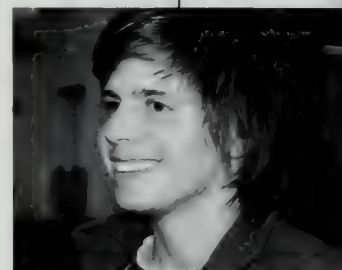

PP: What things did you enjoy doing at SYA?

HW: I took a photography course in French and that was really challenging because I had never taken photography before. I took it at a French Fine Arts University, so it wasn't catered to English speakers at all. In the end, I was able to get through the class, which felt really good. But of course I don't know any of the words in English. If I was to take a photo class here, they would be like, "Do this!" and I would be like "What's that?"

PP: What about college? Are you looking at schools outside of the U.S.?

HW: I think I am going to stay in the US, but all the colleges that I am looking at have a very strong study abroad program, so that I can do that in the future. I am not applying anywhere early. I want to get all of my acceptance and rejection letters and spread them out in front of me. And be like, "I'll go here!"

My favorite class is:
International Relations

and my favorite teacher is:
Mr. Bardo

I came to Andover because:
of the college admissions rates

After classes: I typically embark on various excursions throughout the Merrimack Valley

My sport this term was cluster soccer
...if you can call that a sport.

My work habits: are sporadic
You will never find me without:
some outside reading/ my headphones

My most valuable possession:
my music

I listen to:
a lot of post-punk, art rock, and post-hardcore

In my own time:
I play guitar

I would love to:
be part of an art rock or post-punk band and just degenerate into a total junkie.

>> Do you play any instruments or do anything musical on campus?

Actually I just started to play guitar with Pete Lorenzo. Yea, me and Pete we be jamming, you know he's trying to turn me into John Mayer.

Where do you like to study in the library or on campus?

In the library, I like to be in the PACC mostly because I can concentrate. Everywhere else I find people to talk to and we talk forever and I don't get any work done. But the PACC, that's my place

What would I find in your backpack if I decided to randomly rummage through it?

Okay... 'cause I'm a fatty, you'll find Doritos, probably Oreos, and Reese's Cups. One or two books here and there. Probably a pencil, a calculator, my cell phone and my Ipad.

Favorites:

TV Show Grey's Anatomy. It is my favorite ever. I was in love with One Tree Hill for a while, but it became too cliché to manage so I was just like whatever Song/Artist: Alicia Keys.

Food: We have this plate in Jamaica it's called Curry Goat, so I like that a lot Common's Meal: Haha. I have so many to choose from... definitely tacos.

Aspect of Andover: It's diversity, because I live in an area that's predominantly like black people and Jamaicans. So, when I came here, even having white friends and Hispanic friends, that was new to me. You learn so much from different cultures here and from that I've been able to shape myself for the better, hopefully. I just love different people

>> PP: Where are you from?

JL: I am from Quebec. But I have also lived in the States because my dad was an NHL hockey player. We traveled from Canada to Colorado to New York and to Switzerland

PP: How many languages do you speak?

JL: English, French, Québécois, and almost Chinese

JL: I am on Varsity soccer, JV hockey and last year, I rowed for G2. Even though my dad was a big hockey player, he didn't let me play until I was 13 because he didn't want me to get hurt.

PP: What is your favorite sport?

JL: I would say crew. It basically feels like you are flying. It also makes you push yourself beyond your limits and I love working together as a team towards the same goal. And you get to be away from campus for a little while to be closer to nature. Back home in Canada, I lived in the middle of the woods on a lake with 5 chickens and a cow. I just love the feel of nature, and crew reminds me of home. Last year, we won New England's. Each one of us received a gold medal. When I was thrown into the water, the medal slipped from my head and sank to the bottom of the river. Though it was shallow, the river was very dirty and disgusting. My boyfriend actually dived into the water to look for it, but we never found it. However, it's the memory that counts and I guess I will just leave that medal back where it came from and where we won it.

>> I came to Andover from Queens, NY as a freshman, two years ago.

Before coming to PA, I went to a really, really small school, called the Robert F. Kennedy School. There were, like, 80 kids there.

The highlight of my Andover experience was last Andover/Exeter when the PA stadium rushed the field at the football game after we won. It felt so good. I remember the anticipation, people were shouting "We're going to rush the field, we're going to rush the field"! My freshman year it wasn't a good game. We were getting crushed and my toes were freezing and Exeter rushed our field so it felt great to get that revenge.

My freshman year I was a little hesitant to get involved in school spirit because, being from Queens, school spirit wasn't a big thing. But my Lower year I went to a thrift store and got an Exeter geek outfit and I realized how much fun it was to dress up

My favorite extracurricular activity is SLAM. I'm always the person that is laughing and joking but SLAM makes me embody a different aspect of my personality because we have to step with attitude. Right before performances my heart starts to beat really fast because I have this fear that I am going to mess up. Even when I'm out there I sometimes feel nervous and my legs will start shaking involuntarily

From South Dakota, Max Meyer has already made a name for himself. So how does a new upper already have an album? It's easy... just set up a recording studio in your living room at the age of 8. Andover better be ready for America's Most Talented Kid....

Interviewed by Janet Scognamiglio and Photographed by Alysha Sayall

Andover's FAVORITE LEADING MAN

PP: When did you come to Andover?

MM: As a new Upper. I wanted to come for music, diversity, academic opportunities, and its location near the city.

PP: Where did you attend school previously?

MM: Spearfish in Spearfish, South Dakota

PP: Did you have any apprehensions?

MM: I heard that the workload was challenging, but I found it to be manageable. I absolutely love it, because everything is completely new to me.

PP: What accomplishment are you proudest of?

MM: My ability to accept new ideas even if I don't agree. That's something that Andover has presented to me. South Dakota is so homogenous, and PA gives me the ability to hold onto my values and be exposed to others simultaneously.

PP: What is your favorite aspect of Andover?

MM: Making friends from all over the world, and learning about people's cultures.

PP: What interests you at Andover?

MM: I'm very much into gospel choir, jazz band, Republican's club, eco-action, PA Christian Fellowship, and CHILL-Christianity Happening and Living Life.

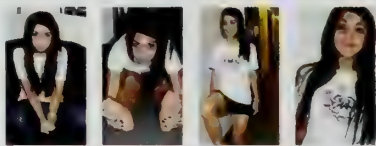

PP: What does your typical Saturday night look like?

MM: I go out to dinner with any charming young lady who asks, which has yet to occur. Usually I just go to dances - I absolutely love to dance. Put on your best face, and the PA community will be so supportive.

PP: Can you tell us about your musical talents?

MM: My parents bought me a keyboard when I was eight and I taught myself by sitting in front of the TV and playing the jingles off the commercials. My dad would bribe me with cookies if I could play his favorite songs from guys like Lynyrd Skynyrd. Eventually I began taking classical lessons. The jazz thing I picked up on my own - it's really what I'm passionate about. I have total appreciation for classical musicians, but deep down inside I'm jazz, gospel, and R&B performer. My community back at home was always very supportive of me and when I was ten I was playing at every event in town and I got a following for my music, so I decided to make an album. We recorded my first album in my living room and they were all original songs that I'd written. It went well, so I started expanding and I'd perform in surrounding towns. By the age of 13 I'd built up a good name for myself in the region. I recorded my second album in Denver, Colorado. It was professionally produced, and entitled "The Time Has Come." That was a turning point in my musical career, because radio stations started playing my stuff so I started going to festivals in neighboring states. So when I was 15, in 2005, I got to perform on the show America's Most Talented Kids. I sent in a tape and I flew to LA and performed The Lady Is A Tramp by Frank Sinatra and won. I came back to South Dakota and they had a massive party for me and I got a key to the city and I got my own day. April 3rd is Maxwell Meyer day.

KAITE

What I've learned

ESTABA

(1)

PP: How did you hear about Andover?

KE: My cousin went to Exeter, and he's a jerk! So why not Andover?

PP: What was it like being a new upper last year?

KE: Being a new upper was hell but I got used to it and everything is better now.

PP: Do you have any hobbies?

KE: Listening to music, eating food, and sewing and making fashion designs and making them into clothing. Also, Irish dancing and shopping.

PP: So tell us about your talent. Is it true that you are nationally ranked for Irish dancing?

KE: World ranked, actually. I've been doing it for nine years and I'm at the Open Championship Level. I've been at that level for 4 or 5 years. I've competed in England and Ireland multiple times at the All Ireland Championships and the Great Britain Championships, and in regional and national championships yearly, except for last year because I was new here

PP: Do you feel like you get enough practice while you're here?

KE: Not as much as I wish because I can't go to dance class. I would normally go to dance class on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and have a Saturday competition and then have a Sunday practice, and practice every day other than that. Since I don't go to class, it's just me practicing on my own either in the lobby of GW, Steinbach Lobby, in Tang when I can, in the theatre classroom, or in the dance studio. But it's really hard to get into one of those; it's pretty annoying. I only practice about an hour every night.

PP: Are there any upcoming competitions?

KE: Yes. November 17th to November 19th are the New England regional Championships and I'm dancing on the 18th at 8:00 am, the day after we get out of class.

PP: Are you excited and prepared?

KE: Yes and no. I'm absolutely not prepared but I'm going to wing it because I am confident in how I can dance. We'll see what happens.

PP: So how did you ever decide that you wanted to dance?

KE: Well I was nine. I had seen river dance before and I thought it was really cool. I saw an advertisement for classes and my mom probably didn't know what she was getting into when she signed me up for classes, but then I switched out of that school and enrolled into a more competitive school and I've spent a lot of time there.

PP: Does your mom really pressure you to dance and perform well?

KE: Not at all actually. She likes the whole vicariously living through me thing. She knows how hard I work on this and she respects it. She doesn't push me. She pushes me like a mother should as in supporting me and encouraging me with everything that I do and that's good

PP: How many awards have you won?

KE: I have placed in a bunch of the championships. The highest I've gotten nationally was 20th out of 180 people. I've also gotten 8th out of 40 girls at regionals. I was the prospective champion of the regional championships last year, but I didn't compete in those because I came to Andover. That was disappointing

PP: You mentioned that you're into fashion. When did you first become interested?

KE: I've always loved it. It bothered me that I could never find what I wanted to wear so I started making my own clothes. I've been sewing for a while. My mom taught me and I also taught myself some techniques. It sounds kind of corny but I have visions of what I want people to wear and what I think looks good and what I think should be the next big thing. And I really want to make that come true. I'm going to try to beat Kit Halverson's number of about six models, maybe more for the fashion show. I'm thinking of using neon colors and neon make-up.

PP: What are your biggest fashion influences? KE: Betsey Johnson and Chanel. I also admire Jae's clothing from Project Runway from two years ago.

Before coming to Andover, I was on a jump roping team in my hometown of North Carolina. When I moved to MA, I started an Andover team called the Andover Hoppers, which performed around New England, and went to Nationals 3 years in a row. At Andover High people were silent in classes and it was contagious. No one wanted to work hard if no one else was working hard. Students here are ambitious, and build close connections with faculty members. I love hearing speakers and I find it incredible that as a high school student I have had dinner with both Jared Diamond and Ralph Nader. I am one of two general coordinators of PA's community service. I advise all the coordinators and visit their projects, suggest how to improve them, organize projects without coordinators, organize one-time events, and do logistical stuff. I am the Head for the Center of Global Justice, the Head Editor of In the Mix, and a Blue Key. I run the blood drive, and I am on the all-school meeting committee. It's easy to get sucked into the PA bubble, but participating in the Swarthrahit Program, which was a trip to Bombay, India led by Mr. Mundra, allowed me to see first hand what real poverty is. We lived with students from India and Germany, and did community service projects such as working in after school program. I was awarded a fellowship at end of my Upper year to do research on a topic of my choice. I chose the topic of women and poverty, which led to a study of Microcredit Programs, which are loans that non-government organizations give to households in need. I looked at how men and women distribute these loans differently, focusing on how the loans affected child nutrition. The highlight of my Andover career was getting to travel to Delhi on the Swarthrahit trip and meet with the Chair of the Human Rights Commission and the former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in India. I got to talk about what the government was doing in terms of human rights. I always thought that economics was something to make really wealthy people more wealthy, but realized that its something that can be used to develop underdeveloped areas and poverty areas. I am particularly interested in human interests and raising awareness about issues. Community service is a tangible way to connect yourself with the real world.

When asked of his defining moment in soccer, Matt Gorski '09 described an overseas experience. "During my eighth grade spring break, our team (U14 Massachusetts State Team) traveled to Portugal for a two-week tournament. We played other teams our age from France, Portugal and England, and we were proud to be the representative of Massachusetts and overall, the United States. We made it to the finals but we lost to the #2 team in Portugal."

It was one of my best experiences in soccer. The level of competition was just amazing. The person who we played against, soccer is pretty much their whole life. When they played us, they even gave us gifts for us to bring back to the States. It was fun."

My sister brother and my older sister both liked soccer, and they were pretty involved with it. My mom entered me into a youth league, and I've liked it ever since. Now I am playing in a club team called the MAPLE (Massachusetts Premier League Soccer) and I play Varsity soccer in the fall." Matt also plays hockey at PA – and the fact that he can find time for sports here is one of his favorite things about Andover. According to Matt, Andover has just the right balance between academics, friends, and athletics.

Matt definitely makes time to see his friends. His typical Saturday night is spent "hanging out in Taylor until 7:30 and then going to Ryley, the dance, and back to my dorm to sign in." Additionally, Matt is interested in pursuing Spanish, which is his favorite class. He anticipates spending next summer brushing up on his skills in Spain. But this won't hinder his passion for soccer: when asked if he wishes to continue to play soccer at the college level, Matt replied "Definitely yes!" without hesitation.

Tells All ●

He's gone from North Korea to Southern California, from pianist to human rights activist and is starting to make a change ●●

- I was born in South Korea, but I have lived in California for the past three years.
- Music has been a passion of mine for a long time, partly because I am interested in language, and I think music is a universal language. I play the flute in the Symphony Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra
- But, I am really interested in human rights, because I did the Swartharhit program through PA. It was a community service project that took a couple of students from PA to Mumbai, India. We worked with local public schools. We visited the biggest slum area in the world. It was pretty shocking. And ever since then I have been really interested in what I can do to improve human rights across the nation and across the world. This past summer I contacted a professor at Harvard. She was interested in building a peace project, especially in North Korea. I got an internship, and over the summer I did a lot of research concerning human rights issues in North Korea. Some of the things I found out were: over the past five years, the international food program that they use to feed starving children in North Korea saw a reduction of a million children. So one million children starved to death over that time. There were also reports of North Korean women that were deported from North Korea. But when the Chinese government sent them back to North Korea they were imprisoned in concentration camps. The prison guards made them go through forced abortions and would kill the babies in front of the mothers. It was really shocking and it taught me a lot about the cruel tortures of human kind. But there are people out there, in the United Nations and in diplomacy, who are trying to work things out. That's what I did over the summer and what I plan to do in the future.....

THE.dewey.SISTERS

Names: Sarah Dewey IV, Eliza Dewey
From: Wilimstown, MA (and when we say western mass we mean legit western mass. Like people say western mass and they mean Worcester but that's not western mass)

* Sister Act

C: What is the most irritating and the most funniest thing happening your sister here?

E: The irritating thing, is that I'm Sarah Dewey's little sister. And everybody labels me as that. I mean it's nice because people know me. But then again they know me AS her little sister.

S: okay so most annoying thing is that her friends call her Dewey and I'm like, wait, no, that's my name. So, now when I hear someone say Dewey I can't like whip around because I'm not sure that I'm the person that they mean.

C: do you ever get annoyed with her?

S: not really, she's just a little annoying.

E: but the thing is, her and I've grown up together, when I was younger, I was like, wait, this is my sister, I'm not sure.

S: well, once you get older, you don't matter. I mean, I was in 3rd grade, you'd be like, wait, you're hanging out with a 4th grader? Who are you? It was a very frequent.

C: Do you guys like about boys? You think you have hook other up with some dude?

S: well I'd hook you up, I wouldn't want you to hook me up.

E: why not?

S: because you'd hook me up with a lower.

C: okay so can you each tell me something about the other that the whole school wouldn't know?

E: oh I have something, no it's actually really embarrassing.

S: no just say it.

E: she sleeps with her mouth open, so we've taken numerous pictures of her like this.

S: okay lets think of a good one, I'm going to brainstorm. Okay, she goes tagsaling with my mom every Saturday.

C: that's so cute!

Cycle-Across National Champion, Road National
 Champion, U.S. National Team,
 Junior World Cycling Championships in Belgium. She has raced much of the professional circuit, and has successfully ridden 110 miles in one sitting.

Arielle Filiberti

Arielle Filiberti, a four-year Senior from Worcester, MA, spent her Upper year getting up at 5 a.m. every day to cycle – not to mention training during 6th and 7th period. Her hectic routine was an effort to get ready for December's Cycle-Across Nationals. Arielle is in better shape this year and hasn't yet had to follow such an intense schedule. Even better, she has the time to indulge in pancakes and omelets every morning. But you will still find her pedaling hard during 6th and 7th – not to mention racing every Sunday.

Arielle has been a Cycle-Across National Champion and a Road National Champion. She has been on the U.S. National Team, and she went to the Junior World Cycling Championships in Belgium last summer. She has raced much of the professional circuit, and has successfully ridden 110 miles in one sitting. But Arielle's first experience with racing came only a few months before she began her Andover career. When asked how she became involved in cycling, Arielle said, "I actually did a cancer fundraiser, where you ride your bike. It is sort of like one of those walk-a-thons, but it's a ride thing. I trained for that and then I came here and I was going to do lacrosse. But all of the cycling guys were seniors and really hot and they convinced me to do cycling as a Freshman girl! Not gonna lie, I totally did it for the guys."

Being a cyclist at PA apparently has other benefits as well. "I never get day excuses to go anywhere. I go to Boxford, North Andover, Topsfield, that area a lot. Here, I've probably done like 75 or 80 [miles]." But Arielle's adventures might also explain why Andover does ask students to acquire day excuses. Recounting one particular ride, Arielle explains, "I got lost in the middle of nowhere in NH. It was Pelham, NH or something and I had no idea where I was and I turned down this road. Some guy was walking and he was like 'Everyone else just went that way in front of you.' I was like 'Everyone else? What are you talking about?' And he was like 'Yeah, all of your friends.' I was like 'Alright, my friends.' So I went and chased down these people and there were like fifty cyclists. It was a group ride. I said, 'Hey what's up? I'm kind of lost; can you get me back to Andover?' And they were like 'We're from Topsfield; you can come back with us.' So I was a little worried I would be stuck in NH, but it was cool." According to Arielle, you eventually get to know your way around the various cycling routes. In the life of a serious cyclist, it seems, more practice and more experience equate to greater success. But, for those of us who aren't cycling veterans, Arielle took the time to answer some of our most nagging questions...

PP: Is it true that you guys have to pee in your pants while riding?

AF: Um, no. Okay. It's different for guys and girls. Guys whip it out and just pee off the bike, while they're cycling, so it's not actually in your pants. Girls, in long races, have a leader, and the leader has to wear a yellow jersey – they do that in the Tour, too. So whoever's wearing the yellow jersey will call a pee break and like a hundred girls just stop and pee on the side of the road. And all of the traffic has to stop for us, it's kind of funny.

PP: What sorts of things are going through your head during the last stretch of a race or up a hill?

AF: Well up a hill, it's basically just keeping a rhythm in your head – and you just block out thoughts. Coming to the final stretch of a race, there's a lot going through your head because if you're with other people you have to figure out how you're going to out sprint them. You don't want to be leading too far. You want to be behind someone before you sprint around them and win, or whatever. There's a ton of strategy in the last sprint of a race.

PP: Can you listen to music while you're riding?

AF: Yea, you hook up your headphones just in your right ear so you can hear the traffic on the left side, because it's always on the left side and you can listen to your right. I have to say, I have to listen to Nelly "Heart of a Champion" before races because it pumps me up. PP: Do you keep your bike next to your bed?

AF: I do keep my bike next to my bed. It's a little tight in my room. It's better this year I have a little more space. Last year it was right at my head. It drives my roommate crazy. Sometimes I ride in my room 'cause you can set your bike up on trainer where you're still on your bike, but you're riding and it's stationary. Sometimes my roommate will come back from class and I'll be riding in our room. Haha.

I knew at the beginning of the year that the Seniors were a smart and unified bunch. There was, however, one area of confusion which slightly divided us: the '07 hand signal. To settle the issue, the Class of 2007 voted during the Senior Soiree held in Mrs. Chase's backyard. At the start of my speech I asked for seven volunteers to come up and reveal their own versions of the '07 sign. While Alex Schwartz, Sam Gould, and Karen Schoenherr teamed up to give a very creative display, the real decision was whether or not the seven should be represented in Roman numeral form. Although it looked cool and received a good amount of applause, the Roman numeral gesture could not compete with the cheering level of the simple yet classic left-handed seven symbol. It was a tough choice, but I must say that the left-handed sign looked really good at that Wednesday's All School Meeting

“No one knew what the ‘07 ‘senior sign’ really was at the beginning of the year and different people were throwing up different signs. We needed some unity, so at our Senior Soiree Mrs. Chase proposed a competition. We voted and the one-handed seven won by a landslide. ‘07!!! - Sarah Gardner”

Jonathan Adler (Most Likely to Panhandle and Buy a Jet in the Same Year)

It was three years ago that we gathered for the first time as a class. I, like many of my classmates, was shorter than I am now, and had a girlishly high voice. Today, I'm taller, but the voice hasn't budged. In a way, my unnatural maturation offers a fitting metaphor for the Class of 2008. We may be changing, as we gain new members each year, and say goodbye to some, but fortunately, we continue our strong friendships and our journey together at Andover.

When I waved goodbye to my parents on that first day of school in the fall of 2004, I was terrified. My room was so small that I could touch all four walls from one spot. Each time the adjacent bathroom's toilets flushed, the entire room shook and hissed. And every morning, I woke up with horrible breath. My earliest days at Andover would have been miserable had it not been for the warmth and compassion of my dorm mates in Rockwell. Lucas McMahon helped me to feel at home. Steve Bartz got me laughing, and was the first person I'd ever met from Hawaii (yet he was almost as pale as me). I even met a girl - granted, she was my music teacher, and not a member of the Class of 2008. Things only got better as I met more of my classmates and we discovered that nobody could stop us from ordering Golden Chopstick Chinese food every night. (If you're reading this in the distant future, I presume Golden Chopstick has been shut down for various health-code violations).

It has been a pleasure to experience Andover with such a diverse, welcoming group of students. And as a proud member of the Class of 2008, I think it's important that everyone understand who we really are. I'd say I have a pretty good sense of what we in the Class of 2008 love, as you'll see below. Whether you're reading this in 2007, or in 2047 from your nuclear fallout shelter in a plastic suit (how do you go to the bathroom in those?), I'm sure you'll enjoy "The Class of 2008's Most Favorite Things - in 2007."

Favorite Movie: Babes in Toyland

Favorite TV Show: The Jeffersons

Favorite Song: Anything by Ace of Base

Favorite Food: Seafood Salad Wrap, in Commons

Favorite Flower: Rose? Sure, why not a rose.

Favorite Book: Nope, no books.

Favorite Restaurant in Andover: Who goes out when we've got Commons?

Favorite 24 Hour Pharmacy: CVS

Favorite Vacation Spot: The Pine Knoll

(I'm sure the above will still apply in the years to come.)

Regardless of our foolish taste in food and movies, the Class of 2008 consistently supports itself, and offers an admirable example for the younger classes at Andover. I only hope that in the future, we may continue our friendships, and that we may leave Andover better than we found it. It is an amazing place, but it has been my class, the Class of 2008, that has defined my Andover experience so far. May the good times continue.

After we saw him, we realized that the bus left in 15 minutes, so we ran to the train, which dropped us off at the Prudential Center in Boston. Meanwhile, I'm on the phone with Britney Achin, who was on the bus we wanted, and she says, "You'd better hurry, we're about to leave." I hung up the phone, and a minute later she calls back and asks, "Are you guys still running?" I'm like, "Yeah." And she goes, "Well, you'd better stop; we just left."

he vibrant sun pours through the newly washed windows of the chapel, and the building, in all of its post-summer cleaning glory, shakes with the reverberating voices of the Senior class. The screams make it difficult to think and all of the hands in the air make you forget about the numbers that come before and after seven. Nothing, it seems, could top this awesome display – and then the Upper class is called. Voices break into song, students turn their whole bodies into eights, and there is a general fear that the balcony will actually collapse from all of the joy. Fortunately for the structural integrity of Cochran, the next call for cheers is met with complete and utter silence.

The stillness that grips the Chapel lingers, and students begin to look around. A student in the balcony has his hand in the awkward symbol of a nine, yet refuses to stand or scream. He is conflicted and dazed with thought, stuck between crew and history, football and choir. The boy is not alone in his class; this can easily be observed with a quick glance around the Chapel. A girl in the front row recording the first All School Meeting for the Phillipian also remains wordless as her thoughts drift to her wrestling match, taking place later that day. A swimmer in the back row, surrounded by friends, can't help but work on his math seminar homework while listening half-heartedly to the voices on stage. He represents 2009 just as much as anyone.

All of this could go on for hours, and maybe that is why the Chapel is noiseless. The Class of 2009 may just be the most complex and interesting class at the school. We have our fair share of jocks and nerds, but an unparalleled number who identify as both. 2009 ripens with new lowers and returning students who continue to mature and grow. Each member knows that we are not without missteps or troubles, but it is our ability to excel in every area that has demonstrated how great 2009 really is. We may no longer be as cute, sitting in the pews in the first few days of school, but by the last days of the year we will collectively be among the most accomplished. Cross country titles, math championships, and music awards already rest firmly in our laps, weighing us down, keeping us seated.

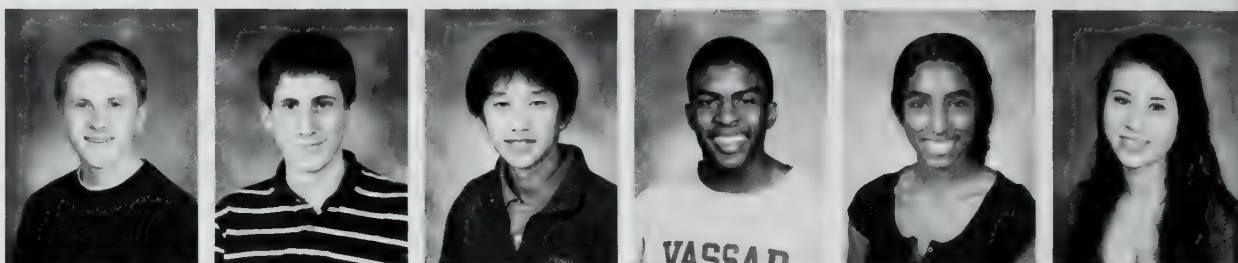

Suddenly, out of the silence, a few scattered - yet vocal - cheers erupt. Momentum starts to gather and the class begins to stand. But before any more noise can be made, the loudspeaker calls to the newest class in line, and they applaud uncontrollably, decidedly less complex and intricate. Those Lowers who were almost erect fall quickly back to their seats and, in hope, remember that there are many more years to find the voice behind the already remarkable success.

By Avery Stone

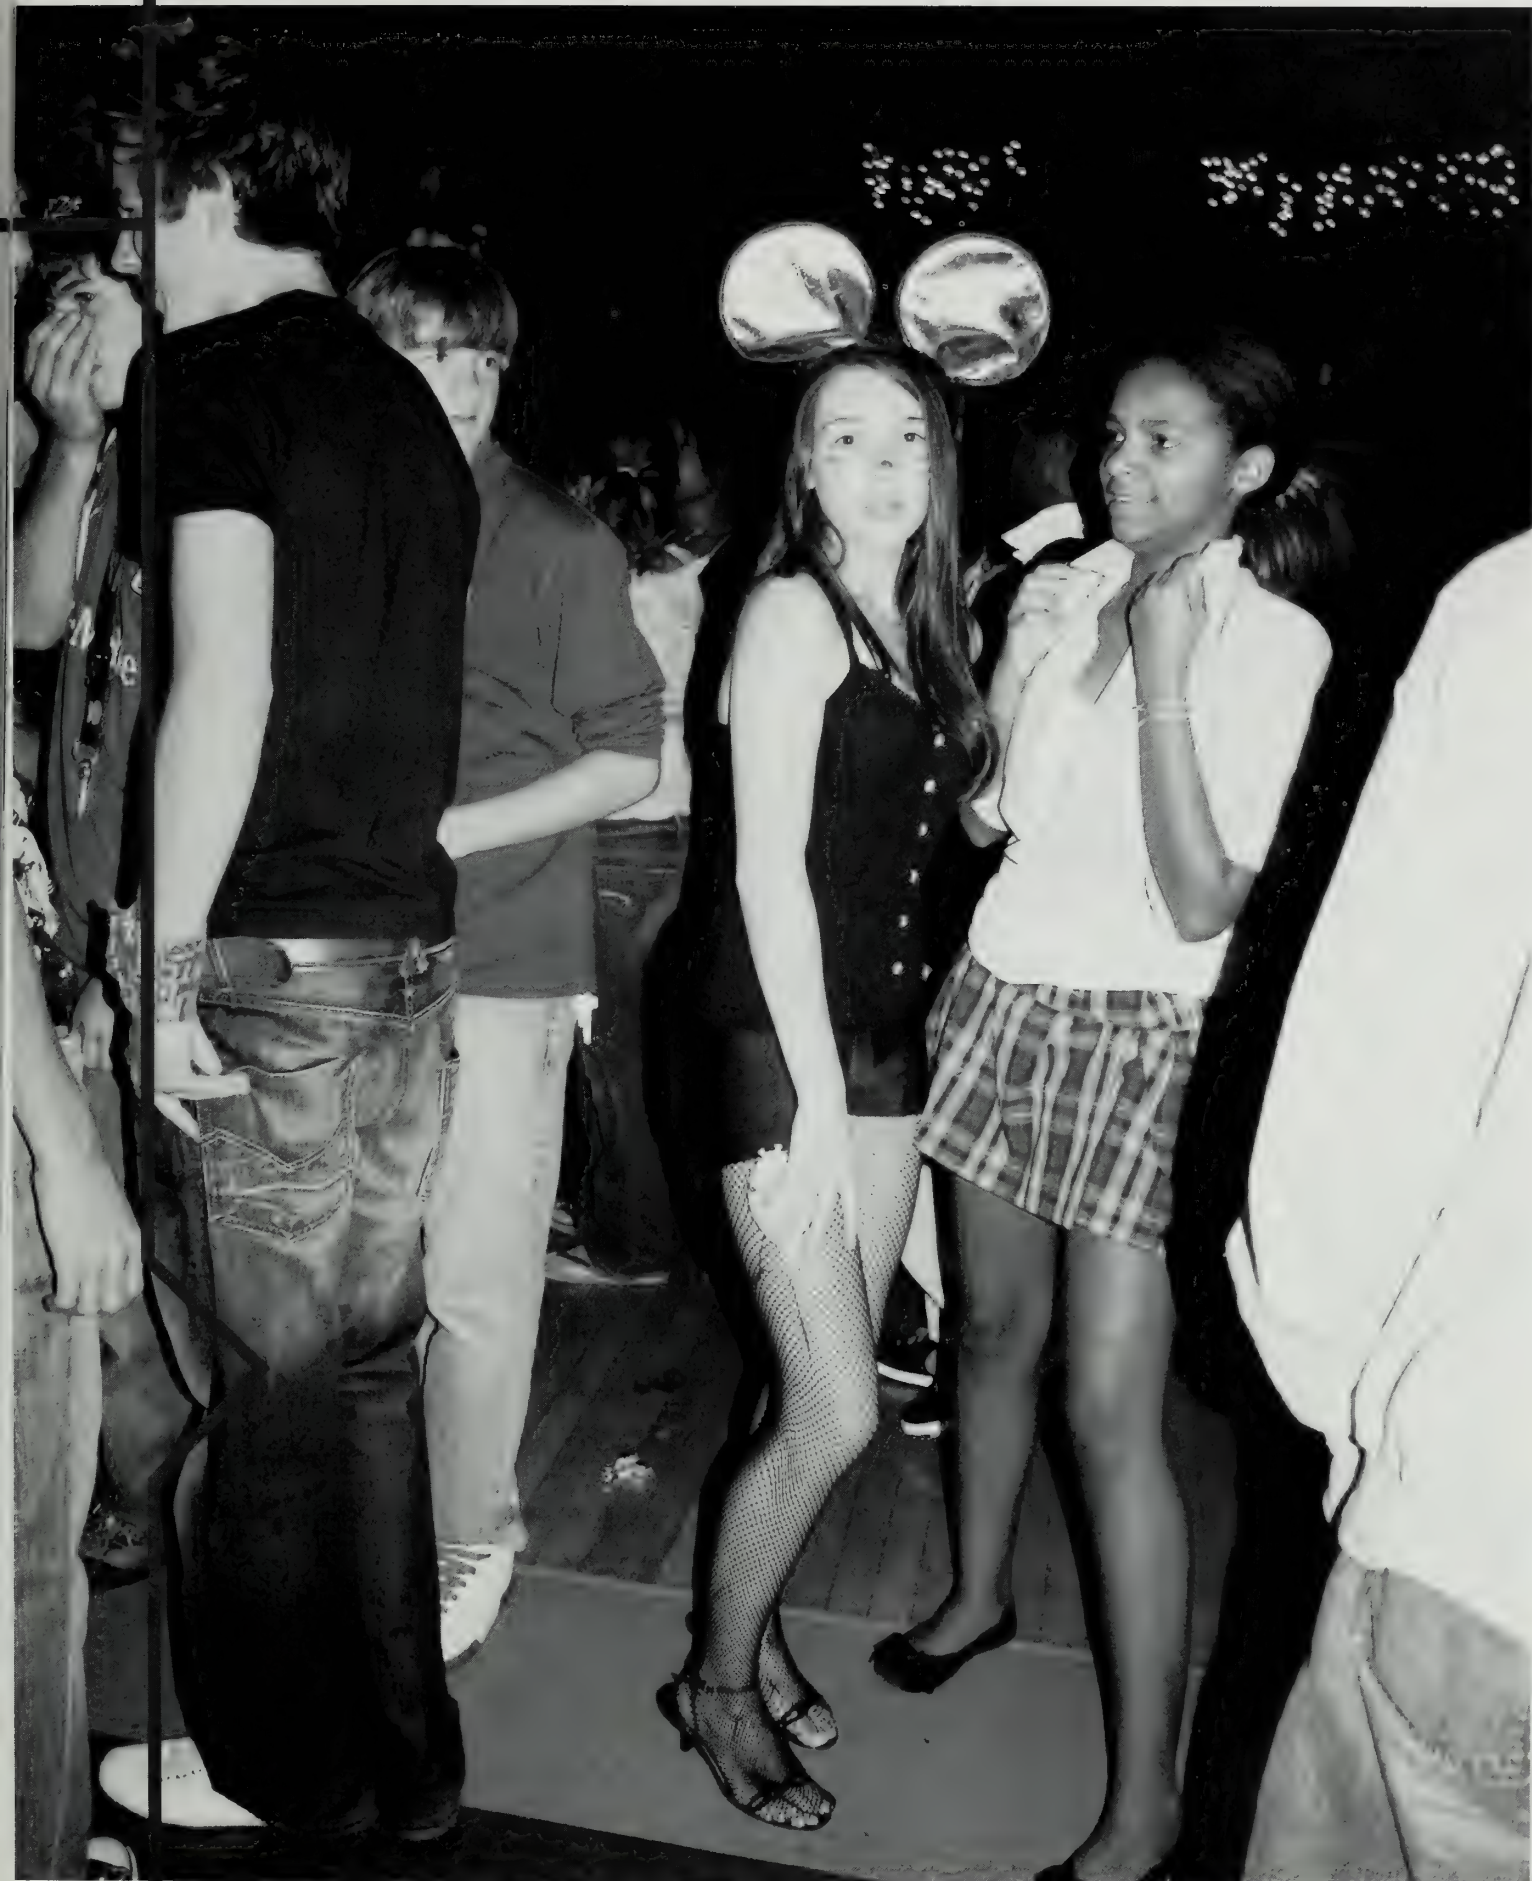

n September 9th, 2006, I officially became a freshman in high school. From what I'd heard, high school is a time when people start to figure themselves out: who they are, what they like, what they want to be when they grow up. It all clarifies here. Influenced by movies, TV shows, and novels about prep school, I pictured high school to be, honestly, scary. On the first day, my head filled with images of what I thought was to come: mean girls, jocks, stereotypes, intimidation, stress, attempts at fitting in, hookups, and breakups. I thought that getting to PA and getting along with my classmates would be the hardest thing that I'd ever had to do. But I was so wrong!

From the beginning, my classmates surprised me with their willingness to come together. By day two, we had agreed on our class hand symbol. By day seven, everyone knew the names of almost everyone else, and virtually the whole grade congregated every night in the Hale common room. By the end of the first week, we were discussing things we saw in the school that we wanted to change. Our class went beyond minor complaints about renovating Ryley – we were talking about recreating the whole Bio 100 curriculum! It was clear that we were establishing an identity. We knew that we felt unique, but what did that even mean?

A few days ago, I asked my roommate to help me find one word to capture our grade. We considered our classmates in 2010 and tried to find a common adjective that describes everyone. But we came up short. The more we thought about our class, the harder it was to pinpoint a unifying characteristic. Finally, it occurred to us. The unifying trait of our class is that we defy definition.

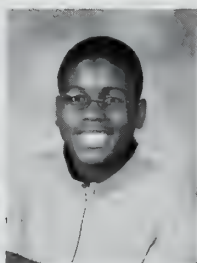

Twenty Ten is modest but ambitious, polite but not afraid to take a stand, mature but graced with very typical freshman-isms. We are diverse in all senses. We are outgoing by nature, but don't come on too strong. We are kind but also have an edge. We are not perfect, but we love that. And most of all, we love to be here. So, class of 2010, let's use our experiences together this year to our advantage. Let the good times, the bad days, the hard exams, the athletic contests, the long nights of studying, the weekends of fun that end too soon, and whatever else comes our way, propel us into our years to come at Andover. Let's continue to leave our mark in every way that we can, and to have fun with it. I have no doubt that we will. Let's keep surprising everyone and let's remain unpredictable, because that is what sets us apart from our '09, '08, and '07 counterparts. With our grade, one thing is for sure: you never know what you'll get. So watch out, PA, here comes the class of 2010!

TOP 2 reasons (the perks of not being a wallflower...) to be a junior

Claire King

The best thing about being a freshman, is that everything is so new and exciting. Whether it's our first Andover/Exeter, or the first time we've lived off Lucky Charms for weeks on end, it's completely different from any other experience we've had.

Hannah Bardo

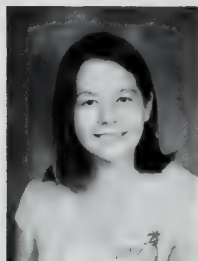

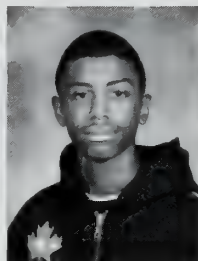

What I like most about the whole freshman experience – besides embracing "FRESHMAN" as my one and only name, being smacked around and thrown into various trash cans – is the fact that we have all entered Andover, and gotten ourselves through it, together. We will always have memories of the awkwardness of orientation, the stares as we dined in Commons in masses, and the excitement of our first pep rally representing the class of '10.

On cold weather:

PA has exceeded my highest expectations, and there's really no place else I'd rather be Except for maybe the Tropics

On boys:

PA boys are undeniably adorable in ties, when they get all dressed up for game days.

On being a freshman:

Being a four year senior will be well worth it, I'm sure

On fashion:

Well all of fall term you're trying to be cute, but come winter you're wearing 17 layers and doing whatever it takes to stay warm

On the campus:

There are these moments when I walk by Sam Phil and it's just like, "Wow. I'm so lucky to be here."

On Andover/Exeter:

Isn't it great how Exeter never has any comebacks? All you need to say is "scoreboard" and that speaks for itself.

On teachers:

They inspire.

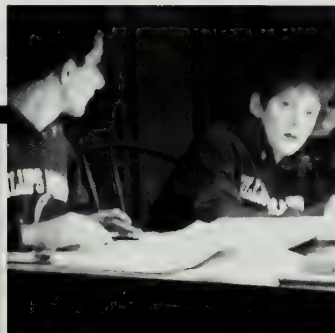

On AHS kids:

Do they honestly think "cat boner" is that funny?

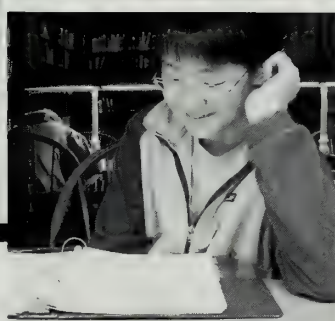

On Nathan Hale:

Living in Nathan Hale is INCREDIBLE. I never get bored... whether it's a dance party in someone's room, a movie plus popcorn session in the common room, or just having fun with a Mac Photobooth, there's never a dull moment. I love our egg-carton ceilings, the boys that are ALWAYS in our common room, Mrs. Pryde's apples, and of course, Nathan Hale himself.

“ Ms. Shimazu always has the greatest anecdotes. I think the best “Ms. Shimazu story” was when she was driving down Main Street and a student “walked into her car”. The student was completely fine; it was actually Ms. Shimazu who fainted and was utterly traumatized. She definitely lives by the rule “look both sides before crossing Main Street.” ”

Nine things you didn't know about Mr. Moss:

Mr. Moss once calculated how many miles he has logged as a bus driver, ferrying rowers back and forth to the boathouse in west Andover, day after day, spring and fall, year after year, decade after decade. The number was in the tens of thousands. Bus drivers have to spend hours and hours every year to earn and renew their licenses, taking tests, on Saturdays, during vacations, all this above and beyond the duties of most coaches at P.A. And yet, not one student has stepped on that bus and not been greeted by a hearty "Bonjour!" or an enchanting giggle from the jolliest driver we every met. He loves his work, and is a quiet hero. -Ms. Tousignant

3 >> He had an English accent after living in Scotland for a year when he was five years old.

French teacher &

crew coach, Mr. Robert Moss, retires.

- From coaching girls crew for 44 seasons at PA, he drove the crew bus around 3300 times to the boathouse or nearly 36,000 miles

- As a HAM Radio operator, he helped save the life of a pregnant woman in the mountains of Colombia. Her volunteer American doctor was also a HAM Radio operator and sent out an emergency call for life saving medicine. Mr. Moss heard the message and arranged for the pharmaceutical company to fly the medicine to Colombia

- His first car was a used Jaguar XK-150 roadster that had been raced by the previous owner and could reach over 140 mph. He verified this once himself on the New Jersey Turnpike

- He has attended several cooking schools in France and likes to cook

- He has spent all but eight years of his life living at a boarding school.

Whenever I think of Mr. Moss, I picture him speeding his launch (the motorized boat the coaches use during practice) over to our boat (the G3 boat) grinning from ear to ear. Be it sunny, raining, hailing, or lightning he would always have this huge smile on his face and you could tell how much he loved coaching us and being on the river. -Kelly Fox '08

Although they may not always realize it, Bob's athletes also learn how to conduct themselves with honor, integrity, dedication, and fortitude--this is 'the zen of Bob'. Off the water, Bob is a kind, somewhat soft-spoken person, but like all of us involved in this sport, on the water, his alter-ego warrior self emerges. Bob never gives up, no matter how unlikely the odds of winning may be.

"When Abbot merged with Phillips Academy in 1973, the school took their name – Phillips - not our name. Ten years after coeducation when the school celebrated the anniversary of the Abbot-Phillips merger, two Phillips headmasters were the ones in the snapshot cutting the cake. Abbot alumnae wondered if Abbot's spirit and traditions would follow the way of its outward symbols.

Abbot lived on in the memories of Abbot alumnae as a culturally zany and old-fashioned, but educationally forward-looking place. Generations of former Abbot students, teachers, and trustees worked with the three successive heads of school to preserve Abbot within Andover.

Now, more than thirty years after the merger, Abbot's physical presence has found renewal in the excellent renovation of the Abbot campus. Abbot's story has been well researched and candidly told in Susan Lloyd's beautifully written history of Abbot, A Singular School. Abbot's heart still beats at Andover in the Abbot Academy Association, a unique organization that funds innovative proposals from faculty, staff, and students."

Cantata is great. We work on one piece the entire year, so once we perform the entire score its an amazing experience. It is so fulfilling to sing in the Chapel, or on Spring Tour, for so many people - our hard work really has paid off! I remember junior year I was so scared that Mr. Thomas would give me his look (which would mean that I was off pitch, off beat, or just plain wrong). Now I just look right back. Cantata is challenging, and it is a lot of hard work. But in the end the work is worth it, because singing the entire piece with Chamber's accompaniment is such a fulfilling experience.

Running a magazine was much harder than I initially thought it would be. The Megaphone would not have come together as a publication if not for the hard work and commitment of each member of the board. Though at times making the deadlines has been a stressful experience, seeing the finished product has always given me a rewarding feeling in the end.

The hour I spend once a week upstairs in the chapel for CHILL is a uniquely valuable time to laugh, relax, and talk. Sometimes only about seven students will show up, while on other days, the top floor of the chapel will be crowded with twenty or more students, all sharing pillows on the floor. The mood (and attendance level) of the meetings change from week to week, yet a dynamic discussion is always guaranteed. On a given Tuesday evening, people come and go as they must; however, the meetings never fail to be relaxed and incredibly worthwhile. Every week, I get the chance to join in a wide range of club discussions (from Philo to Art Club), yet no other meetings are as meaningful as my Tuesday conversations at CHILL. No other club offers such open dialogue and valuable subject matter, not to mention such an endless array of good food. Every Tuesday, I manage to get through all six class periods knowing that good dinner and even better company will be waiting to meet me that evening at the Chapel.

Indo-Pak organizes various events yearly. During Fall term, we put up a Diwali/Eid "variety" show. Diwali is the Hindu festival of lights and Eid marks the end of Ramadan, a period of fasting in the Islamic calendar. The show consists of musical acts, comedic skits, vibrant dances and the much-anticipated fashion show. The fashion show allows everyone (even non-club members) to participate in the show and celebrate Indian and Pakistani culture. In the winter we host a charity dinner in the Underwood Room; this year we made around $1,500!

Being a freshman at Andover is a scary experience; PG's tower over you in Commons and the campus seems impossible to figure out. The hardest part for me however, was getting over my homesickness. There were certain things about home that I just missed- my mom's cooking, family traditions... all that stuff. I joined Indo-Pak my freshman year, not knowing quite what to expect. I was instantly able to connect with everyone in the club; everyone had similar traditions and experiences. Monday nights at 6:00 soon became my favorite time of the week. For that half an hour of so, I felt like I was at home again.

“During Praxis I was paired up with a tough eighth grade girl who had absolutely no interest in school. At first I was intimidated and didn't really know how to approach her or where to start. But as we met more frequently I couldn't believe I had ever been nervous. She was a fun-loving and funny girl not so different from myself and we became fast friends. The term of Praxis was much too short and I loved my experience: getting to meet a new person and learning all about her different way of life.”

“ The Andover Republican Club, held up by seniors Prateek Kumar '07 and Carter Boyle '07 (among several others), aims to create a club for PA students with conservative viewpoints. However, the club members are always encouraging people with different viewpoints to attend, as they are always up for intelligent conversation and debate. We wish to increase respect within the administration, encourage political awareness, increase Republican presence in the Andover community and PA campus, and bring bipartisan events to campus. This past year, the Republican Club has held several events on and off campus. For example, they campaigned for Republican Senatorial Candidate Lincoln Chaffee in Rhode Island, brought the two Veterans Day speakers to campus, and, more recently, brought abortion speaker Alex Sanger to campus for a discussion. This year, we have enjoyed countless events and become more learned in the political world - all while supporting the conservative cause.

The Philomathean Society has experienced an incredible resurgence this year. Though the club has entered itself in comparatively few competitions, all of New England has felt our might in the ones we have graced our presence with. The year started off with a 2nd place overall title at the St. Paul's Invitational, in which co-President Jessica B. White '07 qualified for the World Individual Debate and Speaking Championships in Bishop's College, Capetown South Africa. Also of note are the performances of Alexander McHale '09 and Mary Doyle '08, who captured 1st and 2nd overall Novice Speakers, respectively.

Philomathean dominance was repeated at our very own Andover Invitational—the largest debate of all the tournaments in the fall line-up. Andover captured 1st overall team, with Thomas Smyth '08 winning 1st place overall Novice Speaker. Finally, at the Loomis Chaffee Invitational, Andover boasted the only undefeated Advanced team, and sported no less than four undefeated Novice teams, with virtually all Novice awards being swept away by the Mighty Mighty Blue. Of particular note are the performances of Tiffany Li '09 and Thomas Smyth '08, who captured the 1st and 2nd Overall Novice speaker awards, respectively.

The club looks to the coming years with great anticipation. With our roster of young dynamos, the Philomathean Society looks to march toward victory and enhance and uphold the legacy of the oldest debate club in the United States.

In Amnesty International, we write letters hoping to make a difference in someone's life. We get notices about different human rights violations all over the world and write to influential people (heads of states, judges, etc.) to try and get freedom or, at the very least, legal representation for people in need. It might not do a lot, but at least it does something.

"A spectre is haunting Europe—the spectre of Communism. All the Powers of old Europe have entered into a holy alliance to exorcise this spectre: Pope and Czar, Metternich and Guizot, French Radicals and German police-spies. Where is the party in opposition that has not been decried as Communistic by its opponents in power? Where is the Opposition that has not hurled back the branding reproach of Communism, against the more advanced opposition parties, as well as against its reactionary adversaries? Two things result from this fact. I. Communism is already acknowledged by all European Powers to be itself a Power. II. It is high time that Communists should openly, in the face of the whole world, publish their views, their aims, their tendencies, and meet this nursery tale of the Spectre of Communism with a Manifesto of the party itself. To this end, Communists of various nationalities have assembled in London, and sketched the following Manifesto, to be published in the English, French, German, Italian, Flemish and Danish languages. I. BOURGEOIS AND PROLETARIANS The history of all hitherto existing societies is the history of class struggles. Freeman and slave, patrician and plebeian, lord and serf, guild-master and journeyman, in a word, oppressor and oppressed, stood in constant opposition to one another, carried on an uninterrupted, now hidden, now open fight, a fight that each time ended, either in a revolutionary re-constitution of society at large, or in the common ruin of the contending classes. In the earlier epochs of history, we find almost everywhere a complicated arrangement of society into various orders, a manifold gradation of social rank. In ancient Rome we have patricians, knights, plebeians, slaves; in the Middle Ages, feudal lords, vassals, guild-masters, journey-men, apprentices, serfs; in almost all of these classes, again, subordinate gradations. The modern bourgeois society that has sprouted from the ruins of feudal society has not done away with class antagonisms. It has but established new classes, new conditions of oppression, new forms of struggle in place of the old ones. Our epoch, the epoch of the bourgeoisie, possesses, however, this distinctive feature: it has simplified the class antagonisms. Society as a whole is more and more splitting up into two great hostile camps, into two great classes, directly facing each other: Bourgeoisie and Proletariat... In short, the Communists everywhere support every revolutionary movement against the existing social and political order of things. In all these movements they bring to the front, as the leading question in each, the property question, no matter what its degree of development at the time. Finally, they labour everywhere for the union and agreement of the democratic parties of all countries. The Communists disdain to conceal their views and aims. They openly declare that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions. Let the ruling classes tremble at a Communistic revolution. The proletarians have nothing to lose but their chains. They have a world to win. WORKING MEN OF ALL COUNTRIES, UNITE!"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your soul,
Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch,
Neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you;
If all men count with you, but none too soon;
If you can make the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run—
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man of Sun.

—Kipling

Take a breath, and be yourself. And then,

Never miss an opportunity to play in the rain,

"I believe that only one person in a thousand knows the trick of really living in the present. Most of us spend 59 minutes an hour living in the past, with regret for lost joys or shame for things badly done--or in a future which we either long for or dread. Yet the past is gone beyond prayer, and every minute you spend in the vain effort to anticipate the future is a moment lost. There is only one world, the world pressing against you at this minute. There is only one minute in which you are alive, this minute--here and now. The only way to live is by accepting each minute as an unrepeatable miracle. Which is exactly what it is--a miracle and unrepeatable."

To Fly Away on Your Wings

Somewhere in that lofty expanse, in a darling sky so blue it makes river nymphs jealous, there exists a palace where time invites you to hold cocktails next to the fountain of youth and to doze off on his bed of marshmallows, breathing in the wisps of eternal life.

You asked whether my Eden existed outside my imagination and that if it did, to take you under my wings and fly you through those angelic doors.

A promise, I made you that evening,
under the warmth of the pastel sky.
Just close your eyes...

You're flying.

Thank you all for making this the best four years of my life.

Volume 120 of Phillips Academy's Pot Pourri was produced between September 2006 and March 2007. The book was printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks in Gettysburg, PA. Sara Nickel, Mary Grinton, Catherine Crooke, Katie Morris, and Claire Voegelé served on the upper board management and made executive decisions. Cindy Effinger and Kennan Daniel were the faculty advisors and Susan Happel served as the Herff Jones representative and design consultant.

physical contents of book

The 408 pages, as well as the profile tip-in, were designed by Mary Grinton, Sara Nickel, Sarah Pucillo, Dacone Elliott, Lindsey Weiner, Sarah Boylan, and Grace Gordon, with the help of Susan Happel and Steve Kent. There are 96 color pages, 48 of which are senior advertisements. The portrait section was created in association with Mark Lawrence Photography located in Haverhill, Massachusetts. Each senior had the option of designing and submitting a 1/4 page senior page. Parents could purchase senior congratulatory advertisements. The cover was printed in vibratex matte navy with a navy and silver silkscreen quarterbound effect. We used silver foil embossing for the title. The pages were all printed on 100# gloss paper on a Komori Super Prefector at our printing plant in Gettysburg, PA. The endsheets were premium recycled material in pepper.

equipment

Each of Pot Pourri's photographers used Canon Digital Rebel XT cameras. The layouts were made on three Dell Intel Pentium 3 Processors joined through the Phillips Academy server and designed using Adobe InDesign CS2 and Adobe Photoshop. The book was submitted on CDs. Our reporters used Sony voice recorders to interview students.

theme & design concept

The theme There Are Two Sides to Every Story was selected by Mary Grinton and Sara Nickel while attending Herff Jones Yearbook Camp at Bridgewater State College during June 2006. It was here where the idea for the insert, endsheets, and cover materialized as well. In the portrait section of the previous year's edition of Pot Pourri, Editor Tess Scott '06, told the story of a first kiss from both the side of the boy and the girl. Although small, this was one of our favorite parts of the book last year and inspired the theme for this year. We collected stories and anecdotes from two sides for much of the copy. We believe that Phillips Academy and its students have several sides to their stories and we attempted to portray at least a few. Our reporters had the job of digging for unique stories and used recorders to capture these voices. The layouts and designs of our pages reflected our theme through the use of dividing lines, and titles such as "Take Two," "Whose Side Are You On?" and "Side Effect." We used Eras Font throughout the book to capture a clean effect that corresponded with our use of crisp lines. We gathered inspiration from several magazines, our favorites included Esquire, GQ, and New Beauty.

selling

The price of the yearbook is $100 or $125 depending on the date purchased. The price includes a spring supplement published in the fall. Parents could choose to buy a whole, half, or quarter senior congratulatory advertisement in color or black and white.

thank you...

Special thanks to all of those who were involved.

First and foremost, thank you to our advisors Cindy Efinger, Kennan Daniel, and Susan Happel for all of your dedication, guidance, and compassion; you helped make this book the best it could be and it really could not have happened without you!

Susan: You were more than a yearbook advisor; you were a friend, a motivator, and an excellent design consultant! Your enthusiasm and love for what you do is contagious. You were committed to helping me achieve my goal and illustrated that through the extra things you did: the voice recorders, ordering requested yearbooks, re-budgeting, and much more. Every meeting was a treat, you pushed me to my limits, never settling for shortcuts or the ordinary, and that shows on every page. You helped me make what I could only imagine in my minds spring into life onto the page. I learned so many things from you, both about yearbook and life, and will always look up to you.

Cindy and Kennan, countless amounts of hours were spent on your couch in the Student Activities Office, and whether they were yearbook related or not, they helped me get through the work with a positive outlook- you made me believe that I could do it and one day the book would be published! You kept me going and did so with a smile. I am forever grateful and will sincerely miss you!

Steve Superman Kent: Thank you for fueling my passion for yearbooks. My short time working with you was invaluable. You tirelessly helped Mary and I pull together a theme, a font, and a cover in two short days!

Thank you Carol Croteau and the technology staff for keeping our technology running smoothly!

Thank you Central Services for always willing to help us send and receive whatever we needed

Thank you to the board. This yearbook reflects all of the hard work we put in and I appreciate you keeping with it and giving it your best. You have much to be proud of. We did it!

Mary: When I say I couldn't have done it without you, I really mean it. I could not have asked for a better partner in all of this. You kept me calm and rational when I was at my worst and stressed out of my mind. When thinking about this past year, I remember our takeout nights, the enormous amount of TV show watching, sing-a-longs (whether they were intentional or not), and most of all just talking and laughing. I believe that you are (as Susan explained) one of those few people in life that "get me." We have gone through the best and worst of PA together, not to mention yearbook camp! You are my favorite roomie and I apologize for the snoring - - Do I smell Bacon???

Cathy: I am so glad that I have gotten to know you so much better over the past year! Whether we were in Pot Pourri toiling away under the fluorescent lights or having an 80s dance party complete with rolly chairs and microphones. I will miss working with you and writing emails half relating to work and the other half joking about things... I will never forget your impersonations and your ability to make me laugh whenever! I'll miss you girl!

Claire: Photography had a lot of assignments and I appreciate all of your help! You kept me company for many long hours and it was always a joy working with you. You went above and beyond your duty and your love for what we were putting together shows. Be proud of your amazing talent both as a photographer and friend

Katie: I am so glad that you were on the board! You are a super talented and hard working person. I appreciate all of the organization it took to get all of the pictures in order. I know that I made some difficult assignments with short deadlines, but you always came through! I loved working with you and getting to know you - -

Special thanks to those that inhabited the basement of Morse for the past year, most notably Henry Frankievich, Steve Farquhar, Danielle Rothman, Emma Wood, Steve Blackman, and Yoni Gruskin - - you made the long days and nights finitely more fun. I will miss the visits, the candy, the radio shows, the yoga ball workouts, the haircuts...and all of the weird happenings in general. It was terribly sad finishing the yearbook without Phillipian and WPAA around for procrastination. Our times together defined my experience here and made it everything I hoped for

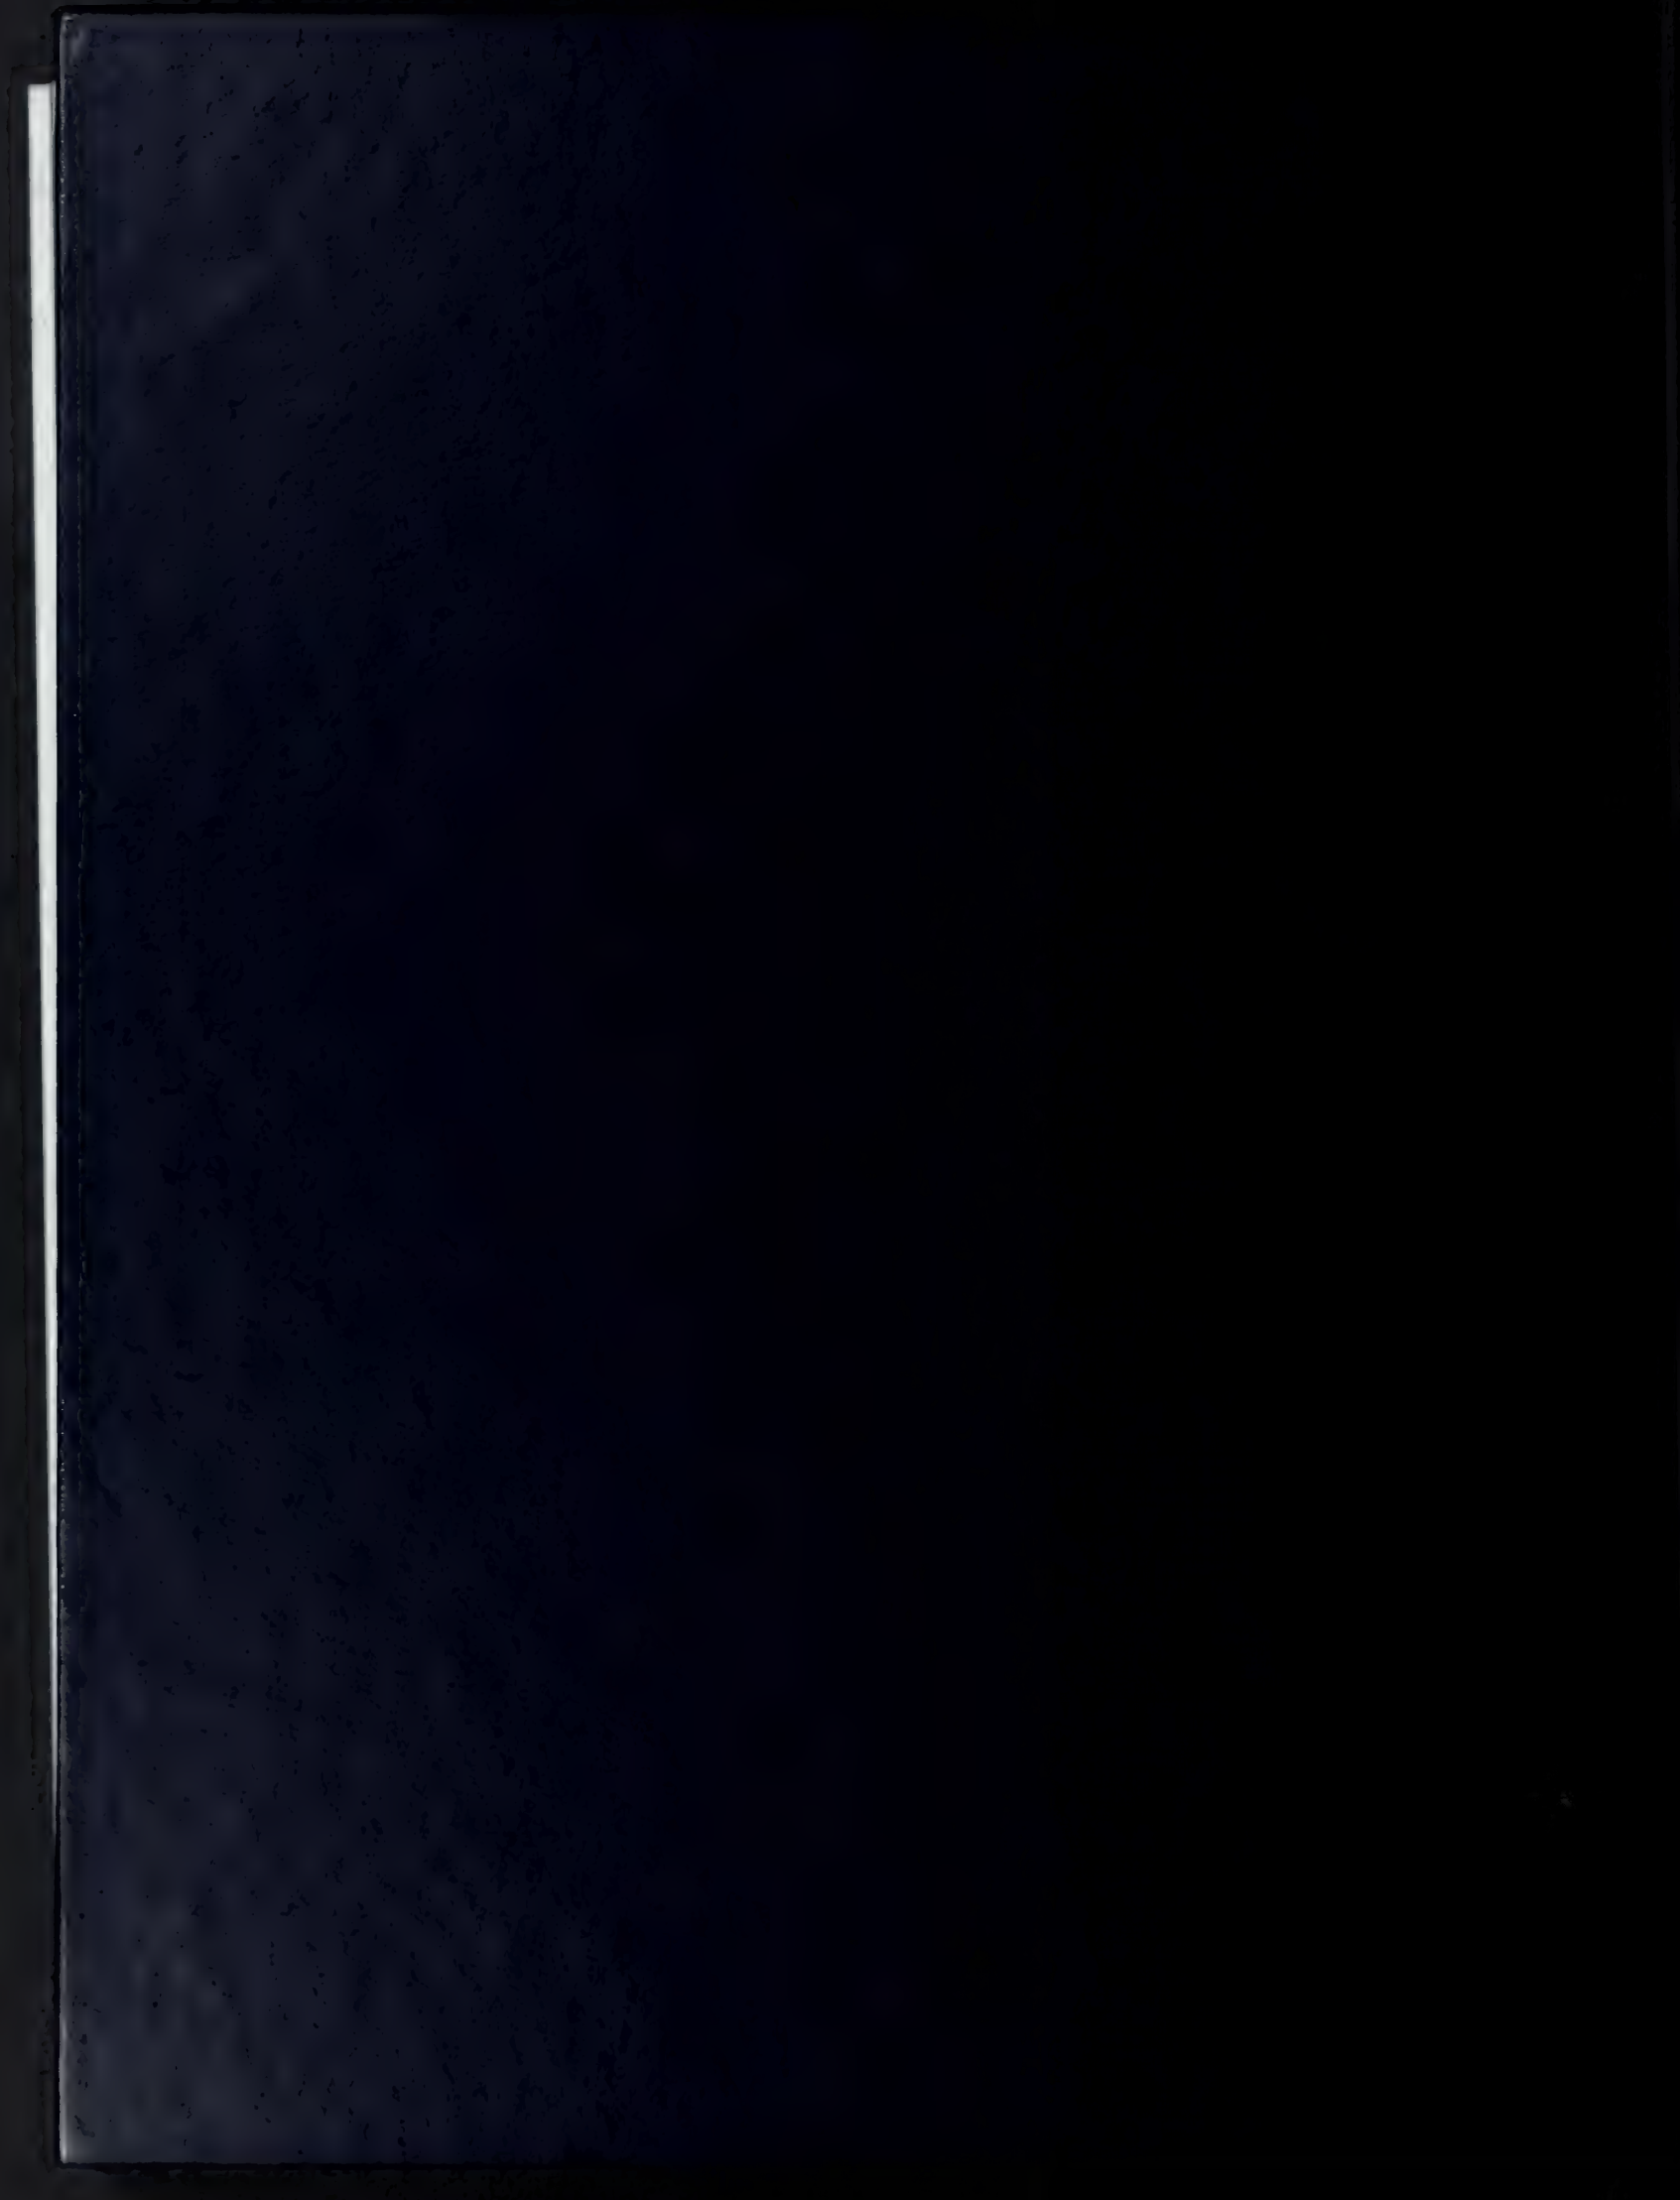

Also thank you to Carrie, Komaki, Ashley and my parents for always being there. I love you all and will forever. Love, Sara

Spring Supplement 2007

Phillips Academy Spring Supplement 2007

The Real World
Andover

180 Main Street
Andover, MA 01810

Welcome to the Real World... or is it?

Spring term is when the Andover campus comes to life. Everyone is surrounded by games like wiffle ball, four square, meat stick, and hackey sack. We tend to get so caught up in our bubble that we forget there is a world outside of Andover. Though renowned nationwide for its academic opportunities, Andover is worthwhile because of its people. The cliché term "Andover Bubble" is just a testament to the bonds we form during our time here. We arrive to campus as strangers, and yet, after bonding over crazy amounts of work, the likes and dislikes of Commons food, and Ryley dances, our lives begin to intertwine. The "Real World," as we like to refer to it, is only termed as such because rarely again will we have the Andover comfort of knowing that a friend is just a door away. Though college offers a similar atmosphere, it will never compare to those first sensations at Andover when the dorm became your home and the people your family. Thus, this supplement parallels the "Andover Bubble" to that of the "Real World."

For some reason everyone thinks that Andover students have no lives. Maybe it's the whole working like dogs thing, but who knows? Spring term all that changes. Spring is not just the light at the end of the tunnel for us, but for the Real World as well. A harsh winter can take its toll on everyone, so it's spring's job to rectify the malice of winter. Spring means sun, which provides us with Vitamin D, tans, warmth, and a colorful campus. Unfortunately rain accompanies spring as well, but everyone knows April showers bring May flowers... and the cancellation of outdoor sports! Obviously, spring term is not all fun and games (unless you're a senior), but there's something about the atmosphere that makes it hard for there to be a frowning face. Whether it's a bad grade or having "cat boner" yelled at you from a car window, the sunshine, lawn lounging, and barbecues cancel it all out, and make spring term one of the happiest times of our Andover careers.

Just one step closer...

Upper Spring is that time of year
When teachers fulfill our greatest fears.
Not those of spiders or other pests,
But those of papers and of tests.

Weighed down by the cruel, intolerable gruel
We gladly cheer
That next year
Is our time.

Springtime blossoms
sweetening the air,
Come oft' late to fall into our hair.
Instead bare skeletons
rattle in the breeze
Waiting for the ground to thaw
Before they too
unfreeze.

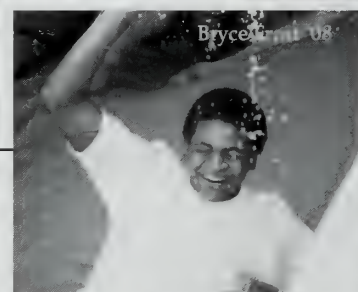

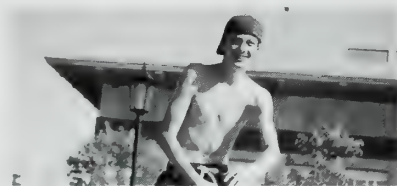

The warm weather brings summer, bittersweet,
The year is ending, but not quite complete,
Freshmen get older and seniors get ready to go,
Lowers are reluctant to think of next year,
But '08 knows their senior year is almost here
You want the class to end, but the students to stay,
You think of leaving with relief but dismay,

*All the complaining was merely a bluff;
When June comes,

"The spring carnival was a blast. By the end, everybody was soaking wet from the various attractions, sticky from the leftover jelly fights, and exhausted from chasing their friends around with squirt guns. It was so much fun to be around all your friends in the great weather on the last weekend with all the attractions around."

...All good things
come to an end.

“Commencement really is the beginning of the rest of our lives, but it is the end of much more. As I was sitting the crowd of seniors, I thought about how this was the last time it would be my/our Andover. Never again would the school be ours, would we gather together again, or chant ‘07 until our lungs gave out. Andover meant the world to me; as I was sitting there listening to Danny I realized it wasn’t the classes, the faculty or the beautiful campus that made it all worthwhile, it was the people. Danny said he would not be losing classmates but rather brothers and sisters; I think everyone felt the same way that morning. I will always remember commencement but more than the ceremony or the words spoken, I will remember who I sat next to, diagonal from, in front of and behind.”

“Graduating from Andover was a great experience. It was very different than graduating from my old high school because of the bagpipes and the passing of diplomas in a circle. I loved graduating with all the new people I met here because we’ve all been through so much together in such a short year. You know what they say, everything is always sweeter the second time around...”
